BERLIN—(INS)—"Vital decisions" affecting central Europe have already been reached by Reichsfuehrer Hitler and Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg of Austria in their conversations at Berchtesgaden, it was understood here this afternoon.

(By Associated Press)

VIENNA—Chancellor Kurt von Schuschnigg of Austria met Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler of Germany for a secret conference today at the urgent suggestion of Premier Benito Mussolini of Italy.

The Austrian cabinet sat in continuous session as Schuschnigg conferred with Hitler at the German fuehrer's mountain retreat at Berchtesgaden.

Franz von Papen, recalled as ambassador to Vienna in Hitler's drastic governmental shake-up a week ago, also was at Berchtesgaden, in Hitler's beloved Bavaria, presumably participating in the conferences.

Arranged In Secret.

The meeting was arranged with greatest secrecy. Schuschnigg left Vienna ostensibly for Innsbruck but entered Germany from Salzburg.

It was stated here that Hitler several times had urged Schuschnigg to make a personal call and the Austrian chancellor yesterday decided to accept after being urged to do so by Mussolini.

Only sketchy reports of the meeting reached Vienna, but one message, purporting to come directly from Schuschnigg, said the outlook for improved relations between Austria and Germany was extremely good.

One report current in Vienna was that the Austrian cabinet might be reconstructed shortly to make places for several ministers sympathetic to Germany.

Hitler was said to have urged Schuschnigg to bring Austria more closely into line with the Rome-Berlin axis that links Germany and Italy, Austria's two powerful neighbors.

Seek Stronger Pact.

Official circles said that the Austrian chancellor was seeking to strengthen and extend the

Garner Party For Roosevelt Scores Again For Novelty

WASHINGTON — (AP) — Vice President and Mrs. John N. Garner scored again for novel entertainment at the dinner they gave last night for President and Mrs. Roosevelt.

Guests marveled at the feats of Joseph Dumminger, New York "mind reader" who played a return engagement as a result of the president's delight in him five years ago.

An innovation this year was the light comedy of youthful Jack Major from Paducah, Ky., who whistled and told southern stories.

Most excited guests were two boys from New York, Gene Buck, jr., 16, and George, 14. They attended with their father, Gene Buck, who arranges entertainment for the Garner dinners, and Mrs. Buck.

TRAINMAN DIES

Burned Fatally When Locomotive, Coaches Leap From Track.

MURPHYSBORO, Ill.—(AP)—One trainman was killed and another badly injured when the engine, tender and three coaches of the Mobile & Ohio fast passenger train, No. 15, jumped the track and overturned in North Murphysboro today.

Engineer Robert Minton of Murphysboro died in a hospital of burns and other injuries a few hours after the accident.

Compulsory Vaccination Called For

State Health Chief Says School Boards Should Make It an Order.

Coming to Mansfield today to help check the spread of smallpox, Dr. Finley Van Orsdall, chief of the communicable disease division of the state health department, today recommended that the city and county school boards order compulsory vaccination for every child before entering school.

He was joined in this recommendation by Dr. Roy C. Rehder, city-county health commissioner, who said he had taken that proposal up with school boards, and it was up to them to invoke such regulations.

Meanwhile, five new cases of the disease had been reported in the past 24 hours, bringing the total in the county to 44. Of that number, four are in the city, making the city's total 18. Of the five, one is an adult, another is a 15-month-old girl, Rosemary Cummings, daughter of Mrs. Nellie Cummings, Clairmont avenue; a third is a child of pre-school age and the other two were school children. The adult is Fred Moritz, 21, 316 First avenue. Charles Love, 11, a student at Newman school, and Roy Baumberger, 17, a Madison township student also are ill. The pre-school victim is Merrell Cummings, 4, the second person in the Cummings family to be taken ill.

20,000 Immunized.

Health authorities reported that 20,000 persons had been immunized against the disease in the past six days by public health authorities and private physicians.

Dr Van Orsdall arrived in Mansfield this morning to survey the situation. His recommendation for compulsory pre-school vaccination, he said, was in line with the state health department's stand.

Accompanying him to Mansfield was Dr. P. L. Harris, also from the communicable disease division. Both state men planned to assist in the vaccination campaign today.

Health department doctors, assisted by volunteer private physicians planned to visit the villages of Lexington and Butler today to vaccinate pupils there.

Before the immunization campaign is over, Dr. Rehder said, an estimated 45,000 persons in the county will have been vaccinated. In the past week, the health deparement has spent nearly $1,000 for vaccine, which costs it five cents a "shot."

At Shelby today, Health Commissioner B. H. Moffat reported that 500 had been vaccinated at school clinics.

'DANGER HOUR'

U. S. Finds Saturdays Bring More Highway Accidents.

WASHINGTON—(AP)—If you're an automobile driver, use a little extra cautions Saturdays between 7 and 8 p. m.

It is the motorist's "most dangerous" hour, the bureau of public roads said today in a report of a highway traffic and accident survey.

The survey also brought out:

That experienced drivers are involved in about 97 per cent of fatal accidents.

That about 56 per cent of the fatal accidents are collisions with pedestrians.

That a masculine driver is more likely to collide with a pedestrian than a feminine driver, but that the latter is more likely to collide with another car than the former.

That car borrowers are more likely to have accidents than the owners.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN

Nation Marks Birth Date of Great Statesman and Hen-Pecked Husband

EDITOR'S NOTE—Each year, on the birthday anniversary of Abraham Lincoln, old stories are recalled and new ones brought to light. Here are three.

(By Associated Press)

SPRINGFIELD, Ill.—Gen. John Macauley Palmer of Kansas City conceded today that Abraham Lincoln did interfere with his Civil war generals, but said the only criticism should be that it didn't come soon enough.

General Palmer, in an address prepared for the annual meeting of the Abraham Lincoln association, said Lincoln was "a great war statesman struggling against the toils of bad organization, bad military policy and bad professional advice."

On Lincoln's 129th birthday anniversary, Palmer challenged the theory of some historians that the Civil war was prolonged because the president was always "butting in" and changing his generals.

The speaker gave this answer:

"If he (Lincoln) had followed his common sense hunch to interfere a few months earlier, he would have shortened the war by at least a year. But . . . for some time he believed that his professional military advisers knew something about their profession."

General Palmer, writer and soldier who has served in Cuba, China, the Philippines and France, contended the regular army officers, with "a total paralysis of intelligence," refused at the outbreak of the war to help train militia regiments.

One of the war department errors cited by Palmer was the shouldering upon General McClellan early in the war the double responsibility, inevitably leading to failure, of commanding both the general headquarters and the army of the Potomac.

NEW YORK—America today celebrated the birthday of one of its greatest presidents — and most hen-pecked husbands, but on at least one occasion, Abraham Lincoln demonstrated that he could dish it out as well as take it. That was the time that Mrs. Lincoln, butcher knife in hand, chased him down a Springfield, Ill., street.

Emanuel Hertz records the incident in his boom "The Hidden Lincoln," published today and based on the writings of William H. Herndon who was Lincoln's law partner.

It was a Sunday morning and Abe was loping along at a good pace with Firebrand Mary Lincoln legging it after him waving a big knife. They drew near a group of church-goers and Abe stopped short, turned and met the oncoming fury. Then he:

"Caught Mrs. Lincoln by the back of the neck and the seat of the drawers, carried or pushed her squealing along the walk back to the house.

"He pushed her in the kitchen door, gave her a hell of a slap on the seat and said to her:

"There now, stay in the house and don't be a damned fool before people.

Hertz reports that "during the years they lived in Springfield, Lincoln, as a general rule, dared not invite anyone to his house because he did not know what moment she might kick him and his friends out of the house."

In addition—"she kept, as a general rule, a stingy table."

RECALLS DEATH FLASH

By DAMON RUNYON, JR.

(United Press Staff Correspondent)

LORAIN—Ninety-year-old Mrs. Josephine Butler rocked in a creaky chair by a small pot-bellied stove in her cottage today and told of the night of April 14, 1865, when in a remote telegraph office in Connellsville, Pa., the sounder clacked out the flash:

"President Lincoln shot. Not expected to live . . ."

"I was stunned," Mrs. Butler, who at that time was a Morse wire "operator" for the Pennsylvania railroad, recollected. "Henry Blackstone—he was president of the road then—and a man named Frick—that big mining man from Pittsburgh—were in the office at the time.

"It was strange, too, because we'd just been talking about the president when the flash came through. I was so shocked I could hardly work the key to relay the message to Uniontown.

"I had to stay on the job all that night to relay the story of

Mercy Dash In Vain

LOS ANGELES—(INS)—A huge transport plane roared into Los Angeles on time and bearing two vials of serum needed to save the life of 14-year-old Behe Kleinberger, paralysis victim, but it was learned today that it was the wrong serum.

The original serum is en route by another plane from the middlewest.

The girl, daughter of Police Commissioner Ray Kleinberger, is in an "iron lung," waging a grim fight for her life.

Doctors at the Cedars of Lebanon hospital, reported today, however, that the girl's condition has shown marked improvement.

STATE BACKS TURNER AS NEW SEWAGE HEAD

Recommendation To Be Given Council Next Week; Calls For Technical Aid.

Mayor Claude M. Hunter will go before city council at a special meeting next week armed with recommendations from the state department of health approving his appointment of James R. Turner as superintendent of the city's sewage disposal plant and urging the re-hiring of James Collier of Elyria as the technical supervisor.

Hunter conferred with F. H. Waring, chief engineer for the state health department yesterday in Columbus. He was accompanied by Turner and A. M. Mook, city designing engineer.

The mayor said that Waring had approved the appointment of Turner and recommended that Collier be employed for a year, at the end of which time Turner would be required to pass an examination for the post. In the meantime Collier, who spent six months as technician at the plant last year, would be responsible to the state health board.

Plant O. K. Up To Sowers.

"Certain mechanical difficulties also were discussed," Hunter said, "and it was the recommendation of Waring that the city put approval of the plant up to George A. Sowers, consulting engineer."

Hunter said it was recommended that the city have the contractors make various changes in the equipment and then have power tests run on the motors of the aerator tank shafts and two comminutors. If the motors show-

Earth Tremors in Indiana Disrupt Radio Broadcasting.

GARY, Ind.—(AP)—Radio station WIND and the Gary Post-Tribune reported early today that two earth shocks jarred a northern Indiana area between Cresterton and South Chicago, awakening hundreds of persons and disrupting radio broadcasting for about 25 minutes by jarring a power tube.

Center of disturbance apparently was at suburban Glen Park, south of Gary.

The radio station said the shocks were felt at 12:30 a. m. (C. S. T.) about two seconds apart and lasted about seven seconds.

KEEPS NAVAL CONSTRUCTION DATA SECRET

Tokyo Note Tells U. S., Britain And France To Build Bigger Ships If They Want To.

CITES TREATY CLAUSE

'Escalator' Provision Permits Powers Larger Ships Should Others Act Before.

(By United Press)

TOKYO—Japan refused today to reveal her naval building plans to the United States, Britain and France and told the three powers, in effect, to go ahead and build more and larger ships under the "escalator" clause of the 1936 London navy treaty, if they saw fit.

The note to the United States, which was almost identical with those to Britain and France, said:

"It is not a matter which should concern this government in the event that your government, on a basis of whatever reason or rumor, should exercise the right of escalation provided in any treaty to which Japan is not a party."

Rejected Treaty.

Japan refused to join the 1936 treaty because the other three powers would not agree to her demands for limiting navies by total tonnage, instead of limiting only the size and gun calibers of different types of ships. Under the "escalator" clause, the three powers are entitled to exceed the treaty limits if any non-signatory power started building excessively.

In her note, Japan declined to consider a new arms limitation conference at which only qualitative limitation (individual tonnage and caliber) would be considered but would join a conference "which would give primary importance to fair, quantitative (total tonnage) limitation."

The deadlock of the 1936 conference thus was renewed.

The naval note was accompanied by a statement designed both for home and foreign consumption. It declared the action of the powers in requesting information from Japan is unfair and implies that Japan is violating treaties to which she is not a party.

The statement reiterated the declaration in the note that Japan is ready to discuss disarmament under a plan attaching primary importance to quantitative limitation.

Constitute Refusal.

The note and statement constituted virtually a refusal to join any limitation conference, because Britain, France and the

City Acts Quickly After Coal Edict To Save $14,000

CLEVELAND—(INS)—Taking quick advantage of the appeals court ruling in Washington temporarily setting aside the bituminous coal commission's price schedules, the city of Cleveland today owned a ten-day supply of coal bought at an estimated saving of $14,000.

Bids for the coal were prepared as soon as the court's ruling was announced. They were presented to contractors yesterday afternoon, and a short time later were awarded for 17,000 tons. The board of control, which met hurriedly to act on the contracts, will purchase an additional 1,400 tons tomorrow.

Specific savings were made in a contract for 9,000 tons of grade A coal for the municipal light plant, awarded at $3.37 a ton, or 57 cents a ton less than the commissioner's prices, and 7,000 tons of grade C for the water division at $2.59 per ton, $1.10 below the previous prices.

'BLOND' TROUBLE

Salesman's 'Girl With Every Car' Slogan Leads To Jail.

LA PORTE, Ind.—(INS)—A blond was standard equipment on every car Joseph Smith sold, with the result today that he is serving 60 days.

Smith, 38, was sentenced to the penal farm for contributing to the delinquency of minors when investigators declared the automobile salesman had 57 girls on a date list which he offered prospective buyers. His slogan was "a girl with every car."

'WE'LL THRIVE,' RUMANIA TOLD

Government Promises Peace, Prosperity As Army, Censors Silence Opposition.

(By Associated Press)

BUCHAREST—With military rule and censorship to silence opposition, the new Rumanian government today issued a program assuring the nation of justice and peace, and promising a new era of prosperity by radical economic, social and constitutional reforms, including organized emigration of Jewish surplus population.

The program assured foreign relations would be continued with Rumania's traditional friends, England and France; affirmed adherence to the League of Nations, and appealed for "christian brotherhood" of all Rumanians under the leadership of Premier Dr. Miron Cristea, patriarch of the Rumanian orthodox church.

Investigation of illegal citizenships acquired after the World war are to continue and "destructive elements" to be expelled.

An official announcement said unconstitutional decrees invoked during the six-week octavian goga regime would be annulled. One of those to be set aside had forbidden Jews to serve as waiters.

Another Goga decree—that ordering Jews to prove Rumanian citizenship by today—was extended rather than suspended, however. The new government extended the time limit to March 10.

Goga's vigorous anti-semitism, fascist inclinations, and economic ills attributed to uncertainty created by his regime were advanced as factors which led King Carol to the new government widespread powers.

1,000 Homeless as 17-Day Rain Floods Streams In California

(By Associated Press)

SAN FRANCISCO—Flood-filled lowlands dotted wide areas of central and northern California today in the wake of a record-breaking rainfall that left 1,000 temporary homeless in one town and accounted for a storm death toll of at least 15.

Hundreds of swollen streams poured flood waters across low lying areas from Fresno 400 miles north of Red Bluff, as rain fell today for the 17th consecutive day.

Mountain snow combined with rain in the valleys to crippple highway traffic by flooding roads or blocking them with snow and slides.

One thousand residents of Pajaro, near Watsonville in central California, waited for the overflowing Pajaro river to recede and let them return to their homes.

A bridge spanning the Salinas river at Soledad, 20 miles south of Salinas on the coast highway, was washed out last night, and fear was expressed at least one automobile hurtled into the river before warning signs could be put up.

The snow pack along the summit of the Sierra reached 206 inches at Soda Springs and Norden, with 18-foot snowbanks along the Truckee highway.

Two woodcutters were killed yesterday and several families barely escaped when an avalanche of snow crashed down on seven cabins at June Lake, in Mono county, 60 miles north of Bishop.

County Court Economizes As 77 Enter Guilty Pleas

Clerk, Submitting Annual Report, Says Elimination of Trials Saved Several Thousand Dollars.

Only three of 80 criminal cases disposed of last year in Richland county common pleas court went through a jury trial, resulting in the saving of several thousand dollars for the county, the annual court report compiled by C. A. McKinley, assignment clerk, revealed today.

In 77 of the indictments returned by grand juries during the year, the defendants either pleaded guilty when arraigned or changed their pleas to guilty before their cases went to the petit jury. The 80 indictments returned by grand juries were 12 less than the county courts handled in 1936.

2-Day Trial Costs $75.

With the cost of each trial estimated at $75, covering a two-days' hearing, McKinley said the savings resulting from the guilty pleas and disposal of the cases by Judge C. H. Huston meant a large savings to the county.

The high percentage of guilty pleas heard by the court was credited to the policy of Judge Huston who warns defendants before arraignment that their sentences will be more severe if they stand trial and are found guilty by a jury.

Judge Huston's policy of leniency for defendants who plead guilty was shown in the 37 cases in which the prisoners were placed on probation. Sentences in state prisons or workhouses were imposed in 32 cases, while five served terms in the county jail and three got off with fines.

Robbery and non-support cases headed the list of offenses on the court docket. There were 11 of each. Forgery cases were next highest, with eight listed. There were six indictments for drug act violations, six for auto theft, six for assault, and six involving sex offenses.

Although there were no murder cases in the county courts during the year, three manslaughter indictments were returned. Two of the offenders were placed on probation and the third received a penitentiary sentence.

The longest trial during the year saw Roy F. Swaney convicted of blackmail and sentenced to the Ohio penitentiary. Two blackmail cases came before the court, both offenders being convicted and sentenced to the penitentiary.

Dead Whale In Bay Causes Official Head-Scratching.

SAN FRANCISCO — (AP) — One dead whale and the possibility its mate is in the bay brought furrows to official brows here today.

Disposal of the 50-foot long female whale, washed ashore in the Golden Gate yesterday, was the problem of Dr. J. C. Geiger, city health officer.

Burning of the carcass was suggested, but the fire department reported it tried that several years ago on another marine monster, and the odor was pretty bad.

Dr. Geiger pointed out that if the whale were towed out to sea it probably would float back again.

Fishermen reported another whale was in the east bay region.

'PICTURE WIRE' YEGGS CONFESS

Police Say Trio Admits 10 Gas Station Robberies.

TOLEDO —(AP)— Toledo's picture-wire bandits, three gunmen whose crimes have baffled authorities since the beginning of the year, today confessed the shotgun robberies of 10 service stations in Toledo and southern Michigan, Inspector of Detectives James Fruchey announced.

Fruchey said the men admitted automobiles used in holdups were borrowed from the garage where Cherry is employed after their owners had taken them there for servicing or storage.

The men were called "picture wire bandits," because they always trussed up their victims with picture wire or leather thongs.

JURORS WEIGH WRIGHT'S FATE

Decide If Air Official Killed Wife, Friend Deliberately Or 'Unconsciously.'

(By Associated Press)

LOS ANGELES—Four women and eight men, entrusted with the life of Paul A. Wright, former president of a $2,000,000 airport, puzzled today over the question: Did he deliberately murder his wife and best friend, or kill them "unconsciously?"

The jury, unable to reach a decision in two hours of deliberation last night, was instructed to resume at noon today (EST).

Judge Ingall W. Bull instructed the jury yesterday it was obligated to acquit Wright if it decided he was unconscious when he killed pretty, 29-year-old Evelyn Wright and John Kimmel, 32, early Nov. 9.

Judge Bill told the jurors they could return one of these five verdicts:

1. Guilty of first degree murder with no recommendation as to penalty, a verdict that carried with it the death penalty.

2. Guilty of first degree murder with a recommendation of life imprisonment.

3. Guilty of second degree murder.

4. Guilty of manslaughter.

5. Not guilty.

These verdicts must be voted upon first for Mrs. Wright and then for Kimmel.

Defense Attorney Jerry Giesler has tried to show that Wright

Commissioners Launch Relief Survey—Hear Township Needs

With the administration of relief turned over to them by the state under provisions of a recently enacted relief measure, Richland county commissioners today had begun a systematic survey of the relief situation in the county.

To obtain a better idea of what the county actually needs for direct aid for indigents, trustees from the more populous townships have been asked to present their relief problems to commissioners, C. L. Mitchell, chairman of the board, said.

First to be called in were trustees from Worthington and Jefferson townships who conferred with commissioners yesterday afternoon at the courthouse.

Mitchell said trustees from Case, Troy and Plymouth townships had been asked to meet with commissioners Monday afternoon and that others may be invited in later.

While several of the county's 18 townships are apparently handling their own relief burdens, Mitchell said the townships including such villages as Bellville, Lexington, Plymouth and Shiloh, have run out of funds and need outside help to cahre for their needy families.

"The county is in no position to offer much help to any of the rural districts, but if we can get a clearer understanding of their problems, it will help us in setting up our program," Mitchell said.

He added that it is doubtful if any of the townships can raise funds to help in the matching of state relief allocations. The matching plan will provide about $5,000 monthly in state funds for relief in the county during 1938 if the county and its sub-divisions can put up half that amount as supplementary funds.

The Mansfield, Madison township and Shelby relief cases have been handled for the past several months under a state-county set-up while the other county districts have provided for their own relief clients.

ART CLUB ENTERTAINS AT COLONIAL PARTY

Mrs. Frank Lane Discusses Antiques as Hobby: Objects Exhibited by Members: Mrs. Boyd Wierman Presents Satire.

THE BALLROOM of the Mansfield-Leland hotel took on the appearance of an early colonial scene yesterday afternoon when 60 members and guests of the Art Study club assembled for the colonial guest tea and antique display. Along three walls of the room were tables laden with old pieces of every kind. The variety of objects, which ranged from lace fans to Currier and Ives prints, were loaned by members of the organization and their friends

Mrs. Frank Lane, president of the club, gave the opening paper following the brief business meeting Her subject was "The Hobby of Antiques." She divided antiques into three periods speaking of the colonial, pre-revolutionary and post-revolutionary Discussing architecture and types of homes, Mrs. Lane pointed out that the ancestral heritage of the peoples affected the style of home designing in various sections of our country.

Architecture.

She then spoke of the English, Dutch, French and Spanish influenced as reflected in our houses of the early periods as well as in more modern design.

Because the colonial settlers had so very little we have very few pieces to collect, Mrs Lane stated. Most of the early pieces of furniture are either originals or copies of Chippendale, Hepenlwhite, or Sheraton designs. The Duncan Phyfe articles are the only strictly American pieces.

Discussing architecture Mrs Lane spoke of the famous homes in this country incldng Mt Vernon, Monticello, the Van Courtland estate and the Morris mansion The entire talk was illustrated with pictures of the various things of which Mrs Lane spoke.

As a Hobby.

Turning to collecting as a hobby, she pointed out the various things which are popular articles for collections Among those collected are furniture, glass, pottery, pictures of houses and doorways, rugs, clothing, needlework, trays, watches and clocks, book bindings, ship models, dolls, shoes, banks, taveran signs and chess men.

Mrs Boyd Weirman presented the next paper which was a satire on modern art. Her talk was illustrated with sketches done by her daughter, Miss Marlene Weirman The talk was illustrative of certain types of modern painting.

Concluding the program Mrs William Hazeltine accompanied by Mrs. A L. Twitchell sang "I Dream of Jeannie With the Light Brown Hair" and "Last Rose of Summer"

Tea was served from a long table presided over by Mrs Lane and Mrs Weirman, who like the other officers and those appearing on the program, were wearing colonial costumes The table was decorated with a milk glass bowl filled with fruit and tall white taners

The club will next meet Feb. 25 at the home of Mrs William Kuhn. Mrs David R. Talbot and Mrs. Marion Brinkerhoff will appear on the program.

Bride Honored At Party Friday

Mrs Harry L Pollock was guest of honor last night at a post-nuptial party given for her by her sister-in-law, Mrs. Harry L. Eyerly, Gettings place. A color scheme of lavender, yellow, and pink was carried out at the small tables Candles in these shades were used on the tables as were small favors and nosegays of sweet peas.

There were eight guests and they wrote their favorite recipes for the recent bride. Bingo was played and prizes were awarded to Mrs. Rose Trexler and Mrs Byrd Pearce. Mrs. Eyerly gave Mrs. Pollock a lace table cloth.

Two more post-nuptial affairs are planned for Mrs. Pollock, who was Miss Grace Eyerly before her marriage. Mrs. John Abbe, Vennum avenue will entertain Feb. 21 and Mrs. Eugene Flory will be hostess at her South Boulevard home, Feb. 23.

Talk On Annuals Given to Members Of Garden Club

Members of the Cottage Garden club were guests of Mrs. B. F. Hagelbarger, 188 West Third street, yesterday for a 1 o'clock luncheon. Mrs. Frederick A. Greenwood was associate hostess and Mrs. T. T. Burns and Mrs. P. J. Patton poured. The 16 members were served at a long table decorated with a centerpiece of spring flowers.

"Annuals For Spring Planting and Dates to Sew Them" was the subject of Mrs. C. G. Erdenberger's paper. She stressed the importance of annuals in the garden to replace perenials which have ceased to bloom and in that way keep flowers blooming all during the season.

Mrs. Erdenberger named the flowers chosen by the all American selections committee Among those selected were a new moon flower called "Scarlett O'Hara," a little petunia entitled "Salmon Supreme" and a salmon rose color snap-dragon known as "Celestial."

"Coronation Gold" was the name of a yellow pansy chosen and a golden crown shade calliopsis was also selected. The calendula selected was called "Orange Fantasy."

Others taken were three double petunias—two from Japan, two marigolds, "Golden West" and "American Beauty" were chosen by the committee. There also were asters, petunias, zenias, and myosotis named in the selections.

The next regular meeting of the organization will be at the home of Mrs. W H. Goodenough, 400 Lexington avenue, March 4. Mrs H. S. Stickler will be associate hostess.

SPEAKS ON ALASKA AT COSMOPOLITAN CLUB

Mrs. Schuster Reads Mrs. Smith's Paper; Mrs. Paul McConnell Presents Talk About History of Timepieces Friday.

MEMBERS of the Cosmopolitan club met yesterday at the Women's Club with Mrs. V. H. Lodde as hostess to hear Mrs. D. P. Smith's paper on "Progress In the Alaska Enterprise." In the absence of Mrs. Smith, Mrs. Fred Schuster read the paper which told of the experiment with the 200 families in Alaska.

These families were taken from the middle west to Alaska where they were established by the government on a loan of $3.300 each. This debt was payable within 30 years The story of the 200 is told by one of them, Mrs. Victor Johnson, a former Wisconsin school teacher Mrs. Johnson tells of their life and adjustments

During the first 16 months that the Johnsons were in Alaska they managed to reduce their debt by $2.300.

The paper by Mrs. Smith was followed by a discussion, "From Haur Glass to Electric Clock;" by Mrs. Paul McConnell. In this paper Mrs McConnell traced the history of time pieces. Her first discussion was on the water glass and from that point she traced the development to the modern electrical clocks For illustration Mrs. McConnell used "The Clock Book" by Wallace Nutting. She also indicated that the banjo clock is the only one considered strictly American.

Members of the club will next meet Feb 25 at the home of Mrs. W B. Osborn. This will be a colonial tea with Mrs W. T. Marquis, Mrs. A. D McKenzie and Mrs. H H. Shaw assisting The papers will be given by Mrs. J. B. Conrad and Mrs. F. L. Hanson.

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 12, 1938.

Drive carefully tomorrow—there's a growing inclination to regard reckless drivers as public enemies.

The original "soapbox orator" died this week in New York at the age of 77—during which time more has been accomplished by soap than by oratory.

"General market conditions" are credited with this week's drop in Ohio's whisky prices—not an effort to stimulate trade, as might have been suspected.

Denying a rumor that he aspired to the presidency of O. S. U., Governor Davey said: "I am in no sense qualified to be president of a university." Recognition of limitations is an evidence of wisdom.

Can Such a Nation Long Endure?

THE "fourscore and seven years ago" of which Abraham Lincoln spoke at Gettysburg have been greatly added to since he gave that memorable address.

It has now been more than eightscore years since "our fathers brought forth upon this continent a new nation, conceived in liberty, and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal."

An end has long since come to the great war between states, "testing whether that nation, or any nation so conceived and so dedicated, can long endure."

But with the ending of the war there came new and even greater problems of reconstruction and progress which have demanded the best thought of each successive generation.

Despite material advancement surpassing that of any other country in the world, it still remains to be determined whether a nation "conceived in liberty and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal" can long endure.

Lincoln saw clearly the problems—and dangers—of his time. It is necessary, in the America of today, that there also be some clear-visioned leaders, as earnest and unselfish as Lincoln, who can chart a safe course for the nation and plan intelligently for continued advancement.

As truly as when said by Lincoln, "It is for us, the living . . . to be dedicated to the great task remaining before us . . . that this nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom, and that government of the people, by the people, and for the people, shall not perish from the earth."

Boy Scouts as 'City Officials.'

MORE of value than may be immediately realized lies in the idea behind the plan of having Boy Scouts spend a day as "city officials."

A number of Mansfield boys are to have that experience next Tuesday, when regularly elected officials will step aside for the day and allow the boys to "run things."

Of course city officials and employes will sit by in an advisory capacity, but there will be opportunity for the boy "elected" or appointed to each position to gain first-hand information as to just how public business is conducted and also to get a clearer idea of the responsibilities of good citizenship.

Scouting has now extended through twenty-eight years in the United States and experience has already shown that it is the type of boys who are attracted to this organization, and who are benefited by its training, that are most likely to possess the qualifications and dependability essential to success in any line of work they may decide to enter.

Not only should boys of Scouting age be given opportunity to observe the operation of city government but they should also, at some time during their high school course, be privileged to come in contact with industrial and business operation; to attend a court trial; to observe the "finished product" of liquor addicts, and to visit some such penal institution as the state reformatory or the Ohio penitentiary.

These boys will be required, within a very few years, to know many things not found in books and not learned in school or college. They are now passing through formative years during which the powers of observation are strong and impressions lasting.

Everything that is now being done—and many things not yet thought of—must be done BETTER in the future. And it is the boys and girls of today who must develop into the men and women competent to do their share.

The World's Cleanest Milk.

THE American dairy farmer can claim, without exaggeration, that he provides the world's cleanest milk, according to an article in the Dairymen's League News.

For more than twenty years, a national war has been waged against bovine tuberculosis. Today that war is drawing to a close, with the "enemy" almost completely routed. Bovine tuberculosis exists on a substantial scale in only two of the 48 states, and the curative work is progressing rapidly in both of them.

Dairymen are now turning their attention to two other bovine diseases—mastitis and Bang's disease. While these ailments are of little consequence to the consumer of milk, they are of considerable moment to the farmer. It is believed that the diseases will be almost completely eradicated in a relatively brief time.

The war against bovine plagues, especially tuberculosis, has been conducted by government bureaus, farm organizations and other groups. The American consumer can be assured that nowhere else in the world could he obtain more sanitary dairy products than in this country.

Biggest Petition.

THE women of England have spoken. What is perhaps the greatest petition ever submitted to any legislative body was presented to the British house of commons early this month. It was borne in by 22 attendants and laid down in 41 bundles before the speaker's desk. There were 804,000 signatures, all women's.

The women of England were complaining about an ancient grievance, the cost of living. They asked the removal of all taxes, tariffs and trade restrictions imposing burdens on consumers.

Will their petition be granted? Hardly. The British government is still carrying a very heavy burden of interest charges on the public debt incurred in the last war, and at the same time is spending several billions for rearmament. Average taxes there are much higher than in the United States. No nation arms and cuts taxes at the same time.

McIntyre's New York Day by Day

WE SET off on one of those aimless Sunday evening strolls without objective. The city generally was hurrying to the movies and cafes. And that is why a shadowy brick church on the fringe of things, its bell tolling so sadly, appeared a sudden symbol of neglect.

Only an occasional straggler mounted the steps and vanished into the dim-lit quiet. Soft notes from the organ came trembling down the nave in a sort of gentle ballyhoo. And on the impulse of the moment, we too, climbed the steps, the first church-going in months.

Like many reluctants I am continually assailed, once inside a religious edifice, for my neglect in attendance. It requires only an hour out of the week and there is no other place where one may so satisfyingly relax into surprising and almost unbelievable calm.

Frequently many pay $6.60 per seat to be bored at plays that offend taste and yet waver between a 50-cent piece and a dollar bill at the church offeratory. I had a far more comfortable seat than at most theaters and was not annoyed by attitude-striking pests.

There was a serene earnestness about the pastor, a Bert Lytell looking gentleman slightly gray and in his 40's, I should say, that was convincing he believed what he preached. His text was, as I remember, from Isaiah: "Thou wilt keep in perfect peace whose mind is stayed on thee, etc." An old familiar theme, of course. Stripped of verbiage, just another version of the aged simplicity: Trust in the Lord. Yet it had a consoling warmth that sparkled an inner glow.

I was interested in the scattery congregation. Probably 100 in a church that might easily seat 500. About six young folk in their teens. Probably 25 middle aged and the remainder oldish, in their 60's. All well but quietly dressed. The complacency was marked in contrast to the usual metropolitan crowd. No fidgeting, coughing or glancing about.

Not since my courting days had I joined in a hymn. I glanced about and there did not seem to be a person not trying to lift voice in song. My grandmother used to sing hymns when dispirited and often remarked she felt happier. "They roll the gloom away," she declared. Indeed, every face did seem brighter, the atmosphere rain-washed.

The sermon over, the preacher was at the door to meet members of his slim congregation. He saw my wife and I were strangers, inquired if we lived in the city and introduced us to a couple near by. We were invited to come often, also to attend a little social event in the basement an evening hence. It was quite folksey and alien to the usual New York manner. Most of his congregation, he said, were regulars. So far as he could observe we were the only strangers there that evening. His church had full membership of 700 but his congregation, he said a bit sadly, rarely averaged more than 300 and that at the Sunday morning service. He took our address and hoped some day he might be permitted to call.

Meandering northward into the buzz-fuzz of the evening roar, we could not help but reflect on thousands of churches similarly struggling—veritable vortexes in the gathering storms. Each trying valiantly and often pathetically to establish a meed of hope, peace and comfort in a hungering world of vanishing faith. And how little most of us aid in such worthy endeavor, morally, financially or otherwise. There is no place in a vast city where the lonely are so pleasantly and sincerely welcomed as the average church. For this reason alone one would think they would be filled.

This, too, I had had a troubling week. Yet I felt markedly reposed leaving the church. There was a tranquility and a fresh clarity of thought and vision about the week to come. Also I slept like the proverbial log that night. Yet like so many laggards it will probably be some time before I go to church again. Too many are that way about matters of the spirit—at a time when as never before have we needed bolstering of cherished beliefs.

Spreading Health.

An Irish physician says good health is a disease. So far, so good. Now that this discovery has been made, medical science should get busy and make it contagious.—Omaha World-Herald.

TO ABRAHAM LINCOLN

In this dark hour of need, the nation you loved and saved looks back upon your stewardship in other troubled years.

When your contemporaries, swayed by passions of the moment, sought to solve the problems of peace by the machinery of war, you pleaded for calmness and understanding.

You were the living spirit of national unity, yet you visualized the nation in the framework of the world. In a short-sighted time, you held to the long view. You saw your day with an eye to the future, in light of the past.

Yours was the passion of intensity, tempered with the clarity of thought. Towering above the welter of chaos and hatreds you exalted the United States and lighted a pathway to guide its citizens:

"With malice toward none, and charity for all . . ."

Woodsman, scholar, statesman, martyr—you did more than save the nation. With soul as near to divinity as is given to man, you taught the people the value of common things by demonstrating the artistry of simplicity.

Sad-eyed prophet of Gettysburg, jester of a thousand quips, lover of all mankind—your words need no revision now!

Today America rededicates itself to your ideals. We pause to honor your monumental work, humbly grateful for the steadfast vision of your noble mind.

In truth it was said of you—"Now he belongs to the ages!"

—Walter Seifert.

Progress In Greenbelt Community Experiment

—By PRESTON GROVER

WASHINGTON—This is our quarterly report on the progress of our favorite test-tube village, the town of Greenbelt which was set up by Rex Tugwell to show the country the way to the orderly life.

More particularly this deals with the business co-operative set up with an advance by a foundation established by the late Edward A. Filene, a Boston merchant endowed with the liberalist tendencies of a Minnesotan.

If you will recall from our previous documents on the subject, Greenbelt is the community just outside Washington where ultimately some 850 families will share low cost rents, govern the city according to the dictates of their own conscience, and decide whether or not dogs shall be allowed.

To date only about a third of the dwellings are occupied, others being filled as rapidly as carpenters and plumbers install sash boards and plumbing.

• • •

First, a Grocery.

THE community began its co-operative venture by opening a food store (grocery and meat shop). It is a self-help job and its operation was assisted in the early days by an official of a large grocery chain who knew how to do these things. An ordinary merchant, no doubt, would enjoy the exclusive right to sell food to the 3,000 or more residents who ultimately will take over the place. Such is the concession the residents are giving to their food store. To a degree it is a monopoly, but the residents who choose to join in the co-operative venture by buying a membership will get a cut-back on the profits.

A gasoline filling station also has been opened, and ultimately the town will open its own beauty parlor and barbershop, drug store with lunch-counter attached, and movie theater. These ventures, however, must await the arrival of enough families to make them self supporting.

• • •

No Price Cutting.

HERBERT E. EVANS, who used to help coach football at Columbia University, is vice president of the Filene endowment known as the Consumers Distribution Corporation, and he was down here recently to see how the organization's first-born was getting along.

From him and from the local management of the co-operative we learned that the organization does not offer cut-rate prices to its customers. A committee already has been appointed to tour Washington stores to see that prices at the Greenbelt food store parallel those in privately operated stores. A can of peas costs about the same as at your corner grocery, but the difference is that at the end of a month members of the co-op are supposed to get a dividend based on the amount of goods they have bought during the month.

The dividend, we were told, runs to about four or five per cent in the case of groceries. Gasoline co-ops, we were told, are supposed to turn about 5 to 15 per cent back to the owner-customers each month. They haven't operated the picture show or the beauty parlor yet, so we can't post you on dividends from hair-raising thrillers and hair-waving operators.

A saving of $2.25 a month on groceries may not mean much to a well paid bank executive, but it must be remembered that Greenbelters pay ranges only from $900 a year to $2,000. If you get more you can't live there.

Do Manners Matter?

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

DID you hear about that recent W. P. A. survey in New York City—the one on "Manners"?

Seems there's been a rising wail of peeved protest against Young America's demeanor. Comparing them, most unfavorably, with the days when Granpa swung a mean kow-tow. So the W. P. A. got busy—scurried hither and yon with its questionnaire amongst boys and girls of all stations of life—from Hester Street to Park Avenue. With quizzes like this:

Do you open the door for your father or mother when they enter the room?

Do you lift your hat to a lady on the street—or in an elevator?

Do you push for a place in the subway crowd?

Do you address your elders as "Sir" or "Madame"?

How do you express disapproval if your opinion is crossed?

Are you chivalrous to girls?

How important do you consider manners?

And so on and on—with results which undoubtedly would have given Aunt Mehitabel the Screaming Meamies. For, almost without exception, the youngsters answered the last question with a patronizing grin.

Manners? "Ha-ha" said they . . . or sounds to that effect.

Kindness? That of course was different. Any Regular Kid was kind—if the situation called for it. Respect and consideration? These also, were on the list . . . provided the other fellow rated them. Not manners just for manners' sake.

"Why bother? Whatsa big idea?" said Young America. And proceeded to express their individual reactions in their own lingo. Somewhat as follows:

Lift your hat to ladies? Why? Women are satisfied with being equals with men. If that suits them, why the fancy flourishes? Moreover, it's a plain nuisance to take your hat off in an elevator. Women are no longer a Special Treat on the streets — they're swarming everywhere, just like men. If you start taking off your hat to every woman, you may be long on chivalry but you'll soon be short on elbow.

Push in subways? Where'd I be if I didn't?

Open doors for the Old Folk . . . bring 'em chairs? In case they need it, of course. Otherwise, they'd probably not thank anyone to treat 'em like Dead Ones.

Chivalrous to girls? FOR PETE'S SAKE—WHY? ARE THEY CHIVALROUS TO US? IT'S ALL WE CAN DO TO HOLD OUR OWN WITH GIRLS, MUCH LESS BOW N' SCRAPE!

In case you're able to stand further shocks, here are two more eye-openers. A general check of all questions showed that—the youngsters down by the tracks have much better manners in public than those up on the boulevards. And boys are far more polite than girls!

A bit startling—yes? And many will take it as crowning proof that the country is going to the dogs.

But why jump to that conclusion? Manners have never been a proof of character nor a true expression of feeling. Never did gentlemen make deeper bows to ladies or write more charming poetry about them than in the Days When Chivalry Was in Flower . . . nor pass more cruel and insulting laws concerning them.

Today, there's not a chance in a hundred that a tired man will give up his seat in a street car—lift his hat in an elevator or assist her properly into her dining chair. But when it comes to legal courtesy and consideration. The Girls have cornered the statutes.

Meaning what? Meaning that Young America has joyously and wisely discovered—one ounce of honest and equal kindness and consideration is worth an eternity of compulsory hand kissing.

No Sunday Trucks.

Wisconsin is to try an experiment in the promotion of safety that will be watched with interest throughout the country. It has a law limiting the use of state highways by trucks during the week-ends. An interesting fact is that trucking concerns have raised no serious objections.

By a rearrangement of their schedules trucking companies generally are able to avoid using the roads when the week-end crush of traffic is on. The slowing down of their transportation is costly and need is recognized of giving drivers more rest. Some Michigan trucking concerns have volunteered so to arrange their schedules. Observance of the safety regulations has made truck drivers generally the safest motor operators on the roads, but the length and reduced speed of many of the trucks make them a traffic hindrance and thus a safety hazard when the highways are congested.—Detroit News.

What One Man Thinks

—By DAVID GIBSON

Action with right intentions are frequently wrong in understanding.

In a book store I just saw a number of best sellers of yester-years on the 29-cent counter.

Our barbaric tax system is like unto a great and growing mortgage upon industry—employer and employed.

A modern theatrical producer has nothing on an old time country Grandma in selecting a particularly dark, windy night to tell her best, hair-raising stories to her grandchildren.

What's become of the huge, white, muslin, tent-like cover, let down and pulled off by a rope and pulley—to keep the hay-seed and roosting chicken off the top of the old-time family, Sunday-go-to-meetin' carriage?

Hazards Control Life on Earth.

MOTHER EARTH adjusts life to environments, controls it to exposed hazards—all on the laws of averages.

She increases or decreases the time between conception and birth, regulates the number to be born, and all in accord with requirements.

Life is super-abundant where chances of destruction are great, as in the case of seeds, insects, fish; it becomes less abundant with increase in size, and finally dwindles to a comparatively few, as in the case of large animals, birds and fish.

These Vermilion, Ohio, eagles offer an interesting lesson in the workings of Mother Nature.

Among the largest of birds, they have been observed by Dr. Francis H. Herrick, Western Reserve University professor emeritus, for a number of years from a steel tower built near their nest. He estimates that a pair of eagles will lay 100 eggs in 50 years, and barely succeed in bringing to maturity a single pair of birds within that time.

Mother Earth hasn't much use for eagles in her scheme of things. Only a few are needed to aid nature's balance, and reproduction is limited to the very minimum.

Powerfully built, perfectly capable to take care of themselves in offense and defense, in the air and on land, their hazards in life are small, and they live to be very old—150 years on the average.

While their diet consists mostly of fish, they will, however, take a small bird occasionally. In the case of the latter, a curious fact has often been observed.

The farmer that keeps just enough chickens for his own use, has no complaint against eagles. They rarely visit his barnyard. But where chickens are raised in large numbers for commercal purposes, eagles become frequent visitors. The explanation for this curious behavior is rooted in their instinct: Too many chickens, and it is their duty to thin them out.

The elephant is another example of nature's careful management. The largest and most powerful of all land animals, he, too, lives in comparative safety. Elephants are vegetarians and denizen of the deep forests. They are very fond of young, tender leaves, and when they are too high for their reach, they either break down or uproot a tree. Thus they assist in thinning out a forest in their wanderings through them, provide openings for a greater amount of light and air, and fulfill their function in life—the preservation of forests.

And as there is not much use for many of them, nature again restricts reproduction. Their period of gestation is nearly two years, and only a single young one is born. Again as in the case of eagles, elephants live to be very old—150 years on the average.

They stand in terror of only one living thing on earth—the swiftest, largest and deadliest among poison snakes, the King Cobra!

This snake, which reaches a length up to 16 feet and is faster than the fastest horse, has often been observed overtaking an elephant in full flight. The latter, totally helpless by reason of his great hulk, can not meet the reptile's incredible speed, and the elephant dies from the effects of its poisonous bite in less than two hours.

The King Cobra is still another example of nature's husbandry. It, too, is limited to a few. Its incredible rapidity of action is a matter of sheer necessity; for its food consists altogether of snakes. And their very existence depends entirely upon their own physical agility.

Fierce in disposition, arrogant in its security and strength, it possesses a high degree of intelligence. All of these traits, shown in captivity, give an indication of the panic with which every animal must be seized when confronted with the King Cobra, and where nature appears to have reached its highest peak in offense and defense—a creature seemingly unappeasable, unapproachable, unconquerable.

But the power that prevents the trees from growing too far into the heavens, represses and controls all living things. There is one creature on earth absolutely unafraid of any poisonous snake—the Mongoose. It is a little 18-inch animal, ridiculously small, but, in comparison with its fierce adversary, it is endowed with not only a superior degree of intelligene, but with a greater speed in movement. It is the only known animal that deliberately and purposely hunts the cobra, attacks it fearlessly, and in a fair fight wins out every time.

When the mongoose has found a cobra's lair or has accidentally run across it, the snake attacks immediately and its strikes come faster than the eye can follow. But the little mongoose is always just beyond reach, darting forward and backward, and making numerous and complete circles around the reptile's position. Gradually the strikes come slower and slower. When the cobra's strength has become utterly exhausted, in the end the little mongoose is just as fresh as ever. It simply goes through motions of attack without actually attacking—merely nimble foot-work. And like an intelligent boxer that sees a real opening for a knockout and acts, it rushes in, fastens its powerful jaws behind the snake's head, crushes the spine, and, after the death struggle has ceased, it calmly proceeds to devour its victim.

The mongoose is fairly numerous in India. It is kept by the natives around their houses to reduce the number of rats, mice, lizards and all kinds of snakes—again keeping nature's balance.

And the lower down in the scale of life, the greater the need of reproduction. Nature indulges in multiple births to forestall extinction.

Pigs, dogs, cats, and the like, all have fairly large litters; most birds raise fair-sized families.

About the extreme in reproduction is the White fish out here in Lake Erie.

It is one of the classic examples of nature's over-abundance.

One single female white fish will lay four-million eggs during the spawning season each year; about four-thousand hatch out, but not more than four will grow to maturity.

Both the eggs and the young, in large percentage, are destroyed by predatory fish as fast as they are layed and hatched.

Ever year storms bury millions of eggs beneath layers of sand and mud; they are suffocated—destroyed with never a chance to hatch.

The hazards are too great—hence the necessity of over-abundance.

And so it can truly be said that hazards control life on earth.

A Farmer's Diary

"It is rather for us, the living, to be here dedicated to the unfinished task remaining before us." ...Abraham Lincoln.

* * *

I SHALL never forget the thrill and reverence that possessed me in the presence of that great, bronze statue of Lincoln which occupies the center of the Lincoln Memorial, at Washington, D. C.

There he sits, our best-loved American—the honest, awkward boy; the dreamy, ambitious youth; the ungainly, humorous railsplitter; the homely orator; the towering thinker; the sad, wise, wonderful president; the beloved martyr. His great head is unbowed. He looks tired and sad, yet there is strength in every line of the pose of his tall body. The gigantic proportions of the statue make the spectator feel, in body and spirit, the smallness of his own puny abilities.

On Friday night, the children remain up an hour longer. It is quite the usual thing for them to come, white-clad for bed in their home-made pajamas, and perch upon the arms of my chair and in my lap, begging for a story. They came so tonight—four of them.

"Tell us a story, Daddy." I thought a moment.

"All right," I began. "Once upon a time, more than a hundred years ago, a baby boy was born. He was a country boy, in a cabin in the Kentucky hills — and he grew to be a giant, of the best, most wonderful kind....."

Schuschnigg was reported to have taken with him bulky police documents showing the character of recent illegal Nazi activities in Austria, activities which Germany agreed to curb under the friendship pact.

Schuschnigg's last general statement on Austrian foreign policy was made in a year-end interview in which he reiterated his determination to block any effort "to make Austria a near annex to a neighbor."

The chancellor pointed his remark by adding that this determination was supported fully "by other countries—such as Italy."

The Austrian official press bureau in announcing the conference said that "no changes in Austrian foreign policy are to be expected."

ADAMICK MAY BE FIGHTING FOR BOXING TITLE WITHIN A YEAR

By DAVIS J. WALSH
(INS Sports Editor)

NEW YORK—Jimmy Adamick, the party Jack Kearns has been blathering about to any and all who care to listen, got his New York unveiling in a gymnasium yesterday and it is now the writer's considered and deliberate opinion that he fellow will be fighting for the heavyweight championship within a year, maybe less. And if they only make that more than a year, I think he's a great bet to win it.

This, I admit, is going pretty far beyond next Friday night and Adamick's New York entree with Harry Thomas, of Chicago, in Madison Square Garden. But frankly I don't believe Kearns is the kind of a mouth organ who would make a match like that, unless he felt that Adamick would win it.

They're going to be fighting for shoe shine money that night and, besides, on what I saw of the young man yesterday I'd say that he punches too fast, too hard and too well for such as Tommy Farr and the retired Braddock and that might even go for Max Schmeling. Adamick, in four rounds yesterday, showed me efery punch in the bag, even a straight right, which nowadays is as rare as honesty itself.

Schmeling has only one hand, the right, and shoots it short. Adamick can do that, although not as well. But he also crosses and uppercuts with it and he hooks a very fast left. In addition, he has a great pair of legs and feet like a featherweight.

I'm aware that I'm putting on something of a rave with this outburst, but the fellow looked awful good—in fact, no young heavyweight of the modern generation has looked better—and against real opposition. This was furnished by two colored boys, Jim Howell, who has been doing well with Trammell and others, and Roy Williams, who probably has gone more than 200 training-camp rounds with Joe Louis and never got slathered as he did yesterday.

* * *

THE fellow has the Dempsey technique, without, of course, the Dempsey punch. He's always punching and always in a position to punch and he gets his shoulders into a punch beautifully.

If there's anything wrong with him, in fact, we'll have to wait until next Friday to find out. This Thomas, whatever else may be the matter with him, is a puncher with a fine disregard for his own health while in there and, if Adamick is at all punch-shy, the thing will come out, like a skin disease. But I still say Mr. Kearns is not the man to commit a social blunder like that.

PRESIDENTS REGAIN VAN

Turn Back Bucyrus, 36-26, In N. C. O. Conference; Two Tied for Second.

MARION—Marion Harding regained the top spot in the North Central Ohio conference standings last night by walloping the erstwhile league leading Bucyrus club, 36 to 26, at the Steam Shovel gym here. Bill Decker led the individual scoring with 18 points.

The victory gave Marion a half-game lead over Bucyrus and Mt. Vernon.

Marion took an early lead and at half time was ahead 19 to 13. The Marion seconds defeated Bucyrus, 29 to 16, in the prelim.

Lore Scores 20 Points In 20 Minutes.

SHELBY — The Yellow Jackets of Mt. Vernon high grabbed a share of second place with Bucyrus in the North Central Ohio conference race here last night as they ran unmolested over Shelby, 69 to 24.

The one-sided victory left the fast-stepping Jackets only a half-game behind Marion which took over the top spot last night by defeating Bucyrus.

Led by Eddie Lore, league leading individual scorer, who accounted for 20 points, Mt. Vernon, after a slow start, began moving in the second period and it was all over. Lore's 20 markers gave him a total of 93 for the season. He played only 20 minutes.

The Whippets battled the invaders on even terms in the first period, but their inability to throttle the Jackets' sharp-shooting guard, led to their downfall.

The clubs opened the second stanza with the score knotted at 5-all, but the Jackets began clicking and at the halfway mark were ahead, 27 to 12. Mt. Vernon continued to add to its lead and marched into the final chapter holding an overwhelming 48 to 16 advantage. It was Shelby's eighth straight conference defeat.

Mt. Vernon's reserve squad defeated Shelby, 23 to 14, in the prelim.

Galion High Routs Ashland, 42-19.

ASHLAND — Galion high strengthened its hold on fourth place in the North Central Ohio conference race here last night by defeating Ashland, 42 to 19.

The Orangemen broke loose with a first-period scoring spree to take a huge 23 to 8 lead and had little trouble coasting through. Ashland blanked the invaders in the second frame, but failed to overcome the big lead. At the half the invaders led, 23 to 14.

Galion came back to outscore Ashland, 10-5, in the third stanza, and whitewashed the losers in the last quarter to ice the game.

Gardner was the offensive star of the evening as he collected 15 points. Howell led Ashland with seven.

The A-hland reserves edged Galion, 19 to 18, in the opener.

Promise Trouble For Tygers, Reserves in Two-Star Cage Attraction.

By OSCAR RUHL
News-Journal Sports Editor

A TWO-STAR ATTRACTION will be unfolded for the edification of the home town basketball citizenry on the planks at Mansfield high school tonight.

In the feature melee, Coach Russ Murphy sends his Tygers against the Orientals of Columbus East, the cage machine directed by Ralph Webster.

Boasts Perfect Mark.

The curtain will be raised on tonight's performance with a preliminary tilt involving the Mansfield reserves and Shiloh of the Twin-Valley league.

The preliminary engagement promises virtually as much action as the main attraction. It pits an undefeated team against a club which boasts a winning streak of 10 games.

One of the powers in county basketball, Shiloh has not tasted defeat in 11 games, but what will occur when it stacks up against one of the strongest reserve teams in recent Mansfield history is questionable.

In all the years of the Mansfield-Columbus East rivalry, the cage representatives of the two schools have yet to stage an inferior contest.

Their meeting tonight is not expected to be an exception.

Records Identical.

While the visitors may hold an edge in height and experience, Mansfield will have at least one thing in common with the Capital city outfit.

The records of the two teams are identical. Both quintets have won eight games and lost six, and tonight each one will be after victory No. 9.

Although East lost an outstanding player in Warren Gerber by graduation, Webster will present a strong lineup against the Tygers.

Mainstays of the team are Leonard Hall, Loren Staker and Norman Marten, who has averaged something like eight points per game.

East's record includes victories over Columbus West, Aquinas, North, South Catholic and Academy, and Greenfield McLain and Westerfield.

One of the teams to defeat East was the crack Newark outfit, which was pressed to win by a 25 to 21 margin.

Mansfield and East have met only one common foe, and the results do not provide a basis on which to predict the outcome of tonight's game.

Win by Same Margin.

The Tygers trimmed Columbus South, 23 to 21, and the Orientals took their fellow townsmen into camp by a 39 to 37 count, the same margin.

Murphy was uncertain today whether Tom Scott will be able to start tonight. The leg injury he suffered several weeks ago has responded to treatment, but the crack forward is still limping.

Dave Shelley will undoubtedly start at a forward if Scott is withheld. He will be paired with Jack Dugger, while John Hallabrin and Jack Lyons will start at the guards and Elmer Dials at center.

The first game is scheduled at 7 p. m.

Dates Set For 'Sweeps'

NEWARK—The annual bowling sweepstakes will be held at the Recreation Center alleys Saturday and Sunday, Feb. 19-20 and Feb. 26-27.

A guaranteed first prize of $50 will be offered in Class A, with other cash awards given for the winners and high scorers in the three classes. A, B and C. Class A is for keglers carrying an average 180 or above. Bowlers with an average of 150 to 179 will be placed in Class B. Class C is open to bowlers with an average of 149 and below.

Four games will be rolled across the eight alleys. An entry fee of $2.00 includes bowling. Paul Knight, Recreation Center manager, is directing the tournament.

WINS AS GUN SOUNDS

St. Wendlin Trims Crestline, 27-26, In Wild Cage Battle.

CRESTLINE—A basket by Magers as the gun sounded enabled Fostoria St. Wendlin to defeat Crestline, 27 to 26, in one of the wildest games staged in the city in years. A heated argument followed as Crestline protested the basket.

Crestline led the greater part of the game. The Crestline reserves won the prelim, 31 to 19.

By CHARLES MARTIN

THE Warriors of Ontario high cinched at least a share of the Richland county league championship last night as they ran roughshod over Bellville, 24 to 9, on the Ontario court.

All Coach Orville Kibler's athletes have to do now to annex their second straight crown is to defeat Union, which invades Ontario tonight in the final game of the season for the Warriors.

Ontario put on a real demonstration of defensive play last night as it handed Bellville its ninth league defeat. Bellville grabbed a 5 to 2 lead in the initial period, and scored four more in the early minutes of the next stanza, but from there on it was unable to account for a point. Bellville led at the half, 9 to 6.

At this point, Kibler's proteges took full command and in short order marched to a 16 to 9 advantage. The defending champions never had any more trouble as they added eight points in the final period.

Matt Hager led the Warriors' attack with 11 points, while Dick Casad dropped in seven. Martin was the only Bellville player to sink more than one basket, getting three to top the losers with six points.

The Ontario reserves did even better than the regulars as they blanked Bellville, 21 to 0, in the prelim.

Butler Defeats Lexington, 24-23.

A thrilling last-period rally enabled the Bulldogs of Butler high to come from behind and defeat Lexington, 24 to 23, in a Richland county league tilt on the Butler court.

Trailing by a 10 to 18 count going into the final chapter, Butler, with King leading the way, outscored the Minutemen, 14 to 5, to strengthen its grip on second place. The victory gave the Bulldogs a game and a half lead over the idle Madison club.

Lexington got off to a fine start to take a 5 to 2 lead in the initial quarter, and continued to march into the intermission leading, 14 to 5. The Minutemen opened the fatal last stanza holding an 18 to 10 advantage and then the Bulldogs struck.

King led the way with 11 points, while Hugenard was high for the losers with eight.

Lexington annexed the preliminary tilt by edging Butler, 25 to 20, in an overtime.

SET FOR TESTS TONIGHT

Cunningham, Lash Win on Eve of Big Boston Carnival.

BOSTON—(AP)—Officials conducting the 49th Boston Athletic association track and field meet, which will be run off tonight before a packed house of almost 14,000 at the Boston Garden, breathed a sigh of relief when their outstanding stars, Glenn Cunningham and Don Lash, the famous flyers, came through their Friday engagements without mishaps.

Cunningham spent the night before the famous Unicorn meet out-footing a mediocre field at New York to gain his fifth consecutive mile victory of the season, despite a heavy cold, in 4:25.2. In Philadelphia, Lash turned in a 4:22.3 mile to highlight an indoor track meet.

DEWEY STOVER TO PILOT GEORGIA-FLORIDA CLUB

DEWEY STOVER, who piloted the Mansfield club to the Ohio State league and Shaughnessy play-off championships last year, was named manager of the Moultrie, Ga., club of the Georgia-Florida league yesterday, according to an Associated Press dispatch.

Alex Hall, president of the Packers' club, announced the selection after conferences with Billy Evans, head of the Boston Red Sox farm system of which Moultrie is a unit.

Although the Georgia-Florida league is a Class D circuit the same as the Ohio State league, it is regarded as one of the fastest organizations in the classification.

Stover, who made his managerial debut in Mansfield last year, makes his home in Tiffin, and is employed by the state highway department this winter.

Last In Standings, First In Averages

Although tied for last place in the won and lost standings, the American Legion club continues to lead the Club handicap league with an average of 914. The Baku Grotto, second in the standings, is also second in the averages with a mark of 864, figures released by Secretary Pete Mayer revealed today.

Art Hilborn remains in front in the individual averages with a 193. He is followed by Thull, who sports a 190 average.

Steele Signed For Mat Show

Meets Bob Johnson In Opener Monday Night.

With the signing of a 20-minute opener, Monday's wrestling program in the Armory was complete today. The third bout to be added to the "power-house" card will send Francis Steele, Plymouth Motor cop, into action against Bob Johnson of Kansas City, a newcomer to this vicinity.

Walter Stratton and Joe Montana meet in the headline tiff Monday. Stratton prepared to fight Montana's tactics with a dose of the same, putting the matter of how the match will be contested squarely up to the Italian.

Montana has a yen for rugged battle and few contenders among the lighties have managed to withstand him. Stratton believes he has the answer.

Stratton and Montana will wrestle for the two best out of three falls, with a ninety minute time limit. This route will also hold good for the Joe Magyar-Spike Ashby affair.

Trim Plymouth to Keep Record Unmarred in Twin-Valley League.

SHILOH—Shiloh high's cage combine remained in the select group of undefeated Ohio Class B basketball teams last night by defeating Plymouth, 27 to 16, in a Twin-Valley league tilt here.

Shiloh, which cinched the league championship last week, limited the invaders to four points each quarter to chalk up its 11th straight victory.

Taking a 6 to 4 lead in the opening frame, the Drummer lads, led by the Moser boys, added to their advantage and went into the second half sporting a 12 to 8 advantage. Shiloh was leading, 18 to 12, as the outfit resumed play in the final stanza.

Robert Moser dropped in seven point to lead the winner's attack, while Jay Moser and Howard accounted for six apiece. Van Wagner topped Plymouth with eight points.

CHAPTER XXVII

Caradad went to the trust company with Terry the next forenoon, drew cash and handed it to him in a manila envelope. When she returned to the hotel, there was a slip in her mail box bearing a telephone number and a request to call. This time, she recognized it. Gerta's. In spite of herself, she could not overcome a little feeling of trepidition when she asked the hotel operator for the connection.

It was the familiar voice, restrained, friendly. "Dad, dear! I couldn't wait until I saw you. I called twice and then left my number. I was so thrilled when I saw the paper this morning. May I offer my congratultions this way?"

"Of course you may. I—appreciate it very much, Gerta."

"I was quite overcome...at all the news. And to think I never suspected a thing! You must have smiled to yourself a good many times when we were talking together. Terry is a very lucky boy and I shall tell him so as soon as I can. I hope you both will be very, very happy, my dear."

"Thank you so much."

"I won't keep you longer, Dad. But I will see you soon and I want to hear all about it." Goodbye for now, dear."

Caradad remained for a moment, her hand still resting on the telephone. That was very friendly of Gerta, and yet...Well, she would be like that...a "thoroughbred."

* * *

Dad's second response to the published account of her engagement to Terry Cantine was in the form of another call on her telephone. John Severance was in the lobby and wuold like to see Miss Vardell.

After greetings were exchanged, Severance said bluntly, "I shan't ask you to go out with me, but I wish we could talk. Is there any place around here?"

"We might go up on the mezzanine." Caradad smiled to herself as she made the suggestion. That seemed to be her regular location for holding court.

When they were settled in neighboring chairs, he began the conversation in his usual brusque fashion.

"I happened to see your picture in the paper the other morning, Miss Caradad."

"Did you like it?" she queried demurely.

"Not in the least. And I liked the story that went with it less."

"I did not furnish that — or the picture," she said quietly.

"That's just it. I know you didn't." Then he added dryly, "Neither did I think you would take my advice so literally. You know what I mean."

"I didn't, either," Caradad agreed with an amused smile. "Then you didn't want to congratulate me...?"

"I did not. And I'm not going to. I was a bit surprised to learn that I had been entertaining a celebrity unawares — offering financial advice, and all that. You have a sense of humor. I suppose I may congratulate you on your financial rating. Worldly goods always are satisfying in their way."

"But that's as far as you intend to go," Caradad mused. She found his attitude interesting for some reason.

"Exactly. I'm not indulging in personalities, either. I just hate to see you drawn into this smoky vortex, money and romance aside. There's something fresh and unspoiled about you. I'd so much rather see you in the clean spaces that produce your kind. And I'm disappointed on my own account—quite a bit."

Caradad rested her chin in her palm and regarded him attentively. "You say queer things," she decided. "Just what did you mean?"

"What I said. You're the first woman I've met in a long time whose society gave me any real pleasure. You're so different and so genuine. I was looking forward to seeing you occasionally while I was home this time. You know — somebody who can talk intelligently and ride live horses. Well, that's out."

"Why?"

"Isn't it rather obvious? The papers are full of your engagement."

"I know. But I don't expect to be a recluse, Mr. Severance. The people here have been very nice to me, and I suppose that I'll be meeting many more soon. But you were right. I know that I don't fit with them very well, yet. Perhaps it's the 'country' in me—but when I make real friends, I try to keep them. And I choose my own."

"And that's very gratifying," he responded. "I even expected it. But there are the conventions, all the same. Perhaps your fiance will share you—some. I'm not sure that he will care for my etchings that I had been looking forward to showing you. But we might inveigle him into going out to the farm and playing with the horses. Goes in for polo, doesn't he?"

"Oh, yes, he does."

Severance left, after chatting awhile of inconsequential matters. He seemed rather pleased, Caradad thought, that she was not to be married in the near future and that she had no present intention of leaving the city. He promised that he would see her soon—said he must congratulate Cantine. They all must get together. His departure was as abrupt as his arrival.

The whole affair was very queer and was becoming more so, the bride-to-be decided when she was alone in her romo. She sat on the side of her bed and stared thoughtfully at Terry's picture; there was a decidedly pensive expression on her face.

Severance had asked if Terry played polo and she had said yes, quite eagerly. She had Gerta's word for that, not Terry's. Gerta had an expensive photograph of Terry on her dressing table. She had a little kodak print. Yet she was engaged to Terry—but at a distance, somehow.

* * *

It had to be that way, of course. She had seen very little of Terry these past days, although he called up regularly to report that he was busy straightening up his affairs and getting down to business in earnest. That was a part of the plan, too. And yet...She was engaged to an attractive man who never so much had kissed her, never showed any affection. Just nice and friendly and, now, very grateful to her.

So far, it had proved a lonely experience. Judge Pomphrette had gone back to Oklahoma. The story in the paper had diminished the pleasure of living at the Rushmore. The clerks, the bellboys, and the waiters regarded her with undisguised curiosity. Caradad fancied that the guests watched her slyly. But it would be the same in any hotel, now. More reporters had sought interviews and requested pictures, but she rejected all overtures. Even her mail box was reflecting the public interest; there were letters and announcements from exclusive shops and beauty parlors; there were polite appeals for donations, to this or that worthy cause, and numerous bold requests for money. The whole thing was taking on the aspect of a burlesque.

Nick Tankersley gave it a final touch by arriving with an armload of long-stemmed American Beauties for Annie. He was as absurd as ever, but a trifle more incoherent. He explained this frankly by saying that he had attempted to drown his sorrows when he heard that that varmint Cantine had double-crossed him. He had sworn to shoot him on sight, then had repented and had been drinking numerous healths to the happy pair. He intended to stage a magnificent rodeo, so he said, in his apartment as soon as he could find enough horses. Would Annie come? That was one purpose of his call.

She laughed and assured him she would. One couldn't help a little feeling of pity for Nick — yet there was something genuine about him, something that warmed the heart.

She told Terry about it that night. Also about Severance's visit and suggestion that they all might go out to his farm some day.

"Very nice," was the brief comment, but he launched rather eagerly into an account of his affairs. He believed his luck had changed...he had done a nice bit of business only today. He seemed more like the old Terry, alert and business-like, optimistic. He had about decided to have an office and wanted to know what Caradad thought. Heretofore, his office had been in his hat. He would start in a modest way—desk room in a friend's place.

"I really got quite a break on the office arrangement," he explained boyishly. "A broker I've known almost ever since I've been here. He's an elderly chap who operates in a small way — select clientele, and all that. Does a comfortable business. It's not a bad idea to be associated with a nice old codger like Evans. One can meet some prospects there, I fancy, that the old gentleman wouldn't bother with. In fact, he hinted today that he might be able to do me a good turn now and then. The office rent he wants is really a joke."

"What did you say the name was?" Caradad asked innocently.

"Evans . . . P. S. I don't think he is any relation to your old admirer here in the hotel. Was that what you were wondering?"

"No . . . Oh, no. He sounds very—very possible."

* * *

Caradad was wondering about something entirely different. Evans was the name of that broker who had told Gerta of Terry's peril! This Evans knew Terry. Caradad was quite sure Gerta had said something about the Evanses being an elderly pair, childless. That was why they had been so fond of Don Greenway. Could it be the same man? If it were why was he so friendly to Terry now? Queer.

Almost as if he had known what was in her mind, Terry said, "I reckon you saw Gerta today." If Caradad had not been preoccupied with the Evans coincidence, she would have noticed that Terry's air was elaborately careless.

"Gerta?" she asked with a slight start. "Why, no. I haven't seen her at all. I told you she called up."

"Funny." Terry lifted his brows. "Maybe she didn't have time. She left town sometime this afternoon. Unexpectedly."

"She did?"

"Yes. Went East for some sort of a vacation—called me up early this morning and told me goodbye. Said she was going to dash in for a minute to see you."

"I'm sorry she didn't. Will she be away long?"

"Why, from what she said, I got the impression it might be several weeks. I don't believe she knew, exactly."

* * *

Terry was lighting his pipe as he spoke, but he also was watching Caradad's face furtively from under his lowered brows.

There was no reason to think that any of his friends had noticed him at the station seeing Gerta on her way. Certainly no one would relay the news. He hadn't wanted to be there, but it was necessary. The same as it was necessary to use a part of his newly acquired capital to ease Gerta's financial difficulties. He had promised that. He also had helped finance this sudden trip, for reasons that seemed good to him. These extras had been rapidly included in the estimate of his needs given to Caradad. He salved his conscience by intimating to Gerta that any further assistance would have to come from his own earnings, naturally, and that possibility appeared remote.

"Terry, dear," Gerta had interrupted softly at this point, "you've no idea how droll you've become since—you settled down."

Her words came back to him now with a sudden discomfort. He spoke abruptly to Caradad. "We've settled—I mean we're acting like a prosaic married pair, already Why don't we go out and take in a movie—go dancing afterward? I'm entitled to ask—collected a commission, you know."

"Why, I'd love to!" she answered brightly.

* * *

As the days passed, Caradad found herself imbued with a contentment that she had not known for what seemed now a very long time. She was almost happy. Terry was engrossed in his business but he called her nearly every day before noon and very frequently arranged to have lunch with her. If they did not dine together, Terry almost invariably came to the Rushmore later.

Although she never pressed him for details, he exhibited a growing desire to tell her about his business and prospects. Some times, she owned a vague desire for an association less commercial in its aspect, but she was satisfied. Terry's friendship for her was very genuine; they were becoming excellent comrades.

In her straight forward dealings with herself, Caradad occasionally wondered how much of her present serenity was due to the fact that Gerta Greenway had passed from the picture, temporarily at least. Gerta had the facility of disturbing her peace of mind. It was intangible but . . . there. There had been one letter from the vacationist, posted from Atlantic City. It was the pleasant, "wish you were here," type of missive. Gerta was enjoying a much-needed rest, but looked forward to coming home. It was a difficult letter to acknowledge, somehow. Dad omitted any mention of Terry and could not have told why. Unless it was because Terry never mentioned Gerta.

Nick Tankersley had run in to chat with Caradad several times The date for the "rodeo" had been set. The object of one call was to ask the guest of honor if she had any particular friends she wished to invite. She had been hoping John Severance would be there and it was perfectly easy to mention his name to Nick.

"Why, of course!" he assured her. "I thought of him the first of all. I wanted somebody who would go into a corner with me and cry in our beer when we saw you and Terry adoring each other. I know I can count on old Sev, because he went for you in a big way the same as me. He'll be there, don't worry."

The last time, Nick announced that he had engaged the ballroom of a downtown hotel for the event. "Easier to keep out crashers," he explained. "Besides, Wilkes doesn't like horses in the house—very narrow-minded in some ways, Wilkes is. He cramps my style a lot. I've been trying to get up nerve enough to fire him for ten years—and can't."

* * *

Nick's party proved rather disappointing. There was little to indicate that anything more than a formal party was getting under way, nothing bizarre, no horses. The only visible attempt to create a Western atmosphere was the costuming of a large jazz orchestra. Each member wore an exaggerated cowboy costume and broad-brimmed hat The growing number of guests included most of the people Caradad had met at Tankersley's earlier party. Only, this time, she was unquestionably the center of attraction. This time, Terry remained her constant attendant.

Tonight, she was "Annie" to Nick Tankersley. There were no ridiculous questions tonight about Indians and bears and cowboys. Miss Vardell was a personage. When the dancing started, she was Terry's partner, but not for long. Young men and old "cut in" with what she thought was unnecessary frequency and persistence.

And no sign whatever of Severance.

Nick, however, was omnipresent. He borrowed the hat of the gratified orchestra leader and assumed general charge of everything . . . leading the musicians, dancing with his women guests, supervising the brace of busy bartenders in a popular apartment off the ballroom, taking out time now and then to look up Caradad and make sure she was having a good time.

2 SUITS OVER AUTO MISHAPS UP FOR TRIAL

Damage Cases Among 3 to Be Heard by Petit Jury Next Week In County Court.

Two damage cases resulting from traffic accidents and a judgment suit for $2,430 are scheduled for trial next week before the Richland county petit jury, according to the court calendar set up by C. A. McKinley, assignment clerk.

Set for hearing Monday is a damage case in which Ralph Irey of Greenwich seeks to collect $20,351 for injuries he suffered in an automobile accident near Shelby last Sept. 18.

Robert Gundrum, Mansfield, is the defendant in the action. He will be defended by Atty. J. C. Arter.

Irey, who says in his petition that he received a skull fracture and internal injuries in the crash, will be represented by the law firm of Long, Anderson and Green of Shelby.

Pedestrian Asks $5,000.

In the other damage suit, W. H. Gray, Mansfield, seeks a $5,000 judgment against J. P. Czernewski, also of Mansfield, for injuries suffered by Gray more than a year ago when he allegedly was knocked down by a car driven by the defendant.

The accident, according to the petition, occurred while Gray was walking across North Diamond street. Atty. Marshall C. Moore represents Gray and Attys. Beam and Beam are counsel for Czernewski.

The third case scheduled for hearing during the week is a $3,430 judgment suit brought against Max Meisel by the City Produce company. The amount, the plaintiff contends, represents the balance due from Meisel who was a former salesman and bookkeeper for the complaining firm.

Atty. G. A. Resek of Lorain will represent the plaintiff while Atty. John C. O'Donnell will defend Meisel.

INCOME TAX IN NUTSHELL

NO. 17

Losses From Casualties, Theft, and Wagers.

To be deductible, a loss arising from "fires, storms, shipwrecks, or other casualty" need not be connected with the taxpayer's trade or business. If his home or his automobile is destroyed by fire, or his summer bungalow damaged by flood or storm, he may claim a deduction for the loss sustained.

Loss of property by theft, or burglary is an allowable deduction, and need not be incurred in trade or business. Hence, the loss occasioned by the theft of jewelry or an automobile used for pleasure and convenience is deductible. It must be established, however, that the property actually was stolen. Should circumstances attending the loss leave the owner in doubt as to whether it was stolen or lost, the claim would not be allowed.

Losses from wagering transactions are allowable only to the extent of the gains from such transactions.

A loss is deductible only in the year in which it is sustained, even though, as in the case of a theft or casualty, it may not be discovered until a later year. Losses compensated for by insurance or otherwise, of course, are not deductible. However, in the event the amount of insurance is not sufficient to recompense for the loss sustained, the excess of the loss over the amount of the insurance is deductible.

In general, losses for which an amount may be deducted for income-tax purposes must be evidenced by closed and completed transactions, fixed by identifiable events, bona fide and actually sustained during the taxable period for which claimed. For instance, a person possessing stock of a corporation cannot deduct from gross income any amount claimed as a loss merely on account of shrinkage in value of such stock through fluctuation of the market or otherwise. The loss allowable in such cases is that actually suffered when the stock is disposed of. If stock of a corporation becomes worthless, its cost or other basis is deductible by the owner for the taxable year in which the stock becomes worthless, provided a satisfactory showing is made of its worthlessnes.

A loss on account of stock becoming worthless is deductible only for the taxable year in which the stock becomes worthless and not for any other year, regardless of the fact that there may not be income for the year in which the stock becomes worthless against which to apply such loss.

CARRIER ISSUES PROMINENT IN STOCK UPTURN

Reflect Interest in Reports Decision on Rate Increases Is Near.

NEW YORK—(AP)—Stocks inched their way into higher ground this week, beset on the advance by frequent profit cashing and lack of trading interest.

Carrier shares furnished the backbone of the upturn, interest in them heightened by grapevine reports the interstate commerce commission soon would render a decision on rate increases. Wall street was inclined to believe it would be favorable.

Transfers averaged less than 700,000 shares daily. Brokers were heartened by the fact volume tended to accelerate on the advances and die away when selling intervened.

Railroad liens advanced steadily in an otherwise lethargic bond market. Domestic corporates managed to edge ahead, while U. S. government issues finished about where they began.

Basic commodities tended to slope downward, the Associated Press index of wholesale staple prices breaking through to its lowest level since November, 1934. In the futures markets wheat and corn were about unchanged to a little lower while cotton pulled ahead a trifle. Domestic lead and zinc were pushed down in the face of unfavorable January statistics.

Affecting steel was a slash of $4 a ton in the price of certain sheet products used by the automobile industry. Pressure was said to be increasing for further cuts, but producers were resistant.

The usual indices were inconclusive.

Rialroad freight carloadings for the week ended Feb. 5 were higher than seasonally expected. Electric power output dropped to a new 1937-38 low. Retail trade as reported by Dun & Bradstreet increased 2 to 8 per cent over the preceding period, but was unchanged to 3 per cent below that for the like period of 1937. Automobile output, far under 1937, was up less than seasonally.

FIRE LOSS $50,000

CHICAGO—(INS)—Hampered by dense smoke, firemen today fought a fire which swept through the three-story brick storage house of the Brennan Packing company at the Chicago stockyards. Damage was estimated at more than $50,000.

JAPAN SPURNS NAVAL REQUEST

Keeps Naval Construction Data Secret; Tells U. S. To Build Larger Ships.

United States refused quantitative limitation in 1936 and have not changed their attitude. Italy refused to join in the 1936 treaty because of the Ethiopian sanctions.

The note was issued after a week of weighty consultation in the course of which the cabinet and navy heads agreed on Japan's policy, based on an exclusive declaration to the United Press that Japan is not building a navy to cross the ocean and attack anyone, but feels free to have a strong navy in her own waters to repel invasion.

The note was sent to Emperor Hirohito for his approval. Foreign Minister Koki Hirota went to the imperial palace to give the emperor an explanation.

As soon as the emperor approved, the note was made public.

Separate Atlantic Fleet Plan Pushed.

WASHINGTON—(INS)—Convinced the present navy is inadequate to defend both coasts, congressional "big navy" advocates today declared they would seek administration backing for creation of a separate Atlantic fleet.

As leader of an east coast bloc of congressmen demanding additional protection in the Atlantic, Rep. Hamilton (D) of Virginia, said he planned to confer with President Roosevelt to urge support for a bill to establish an Atlantic "naval force no less effective in action than the fleet now maintained on the Pacific coast."

The measure would fix the size of the proposed fleet "at no less" than eight battleships, one aircraft carrier, 17 cruisers, 40 destroyers, 35 submarines, 125 airplanes and miscellaneous craft.

This development came on the heels of an announcement by Chairman Vinson of the house naval affairs committee that he would ask the committee to amend the bill authorizing the administration's $800,000,000 naval expansion program to declare a naval policy of non-aggression, but committing this government to pursue establishment of a navy adequate to defend both coasts "at one and the same time."

Hamilton, who is a member of the committee, pointed out that Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of naval operations, repeatedly asserted to the committee last week that even a naval force expanded as proposed would be inadequate to defend both the Atlantic and Pacific coasts at the same time.

President Roosevelt likewise pointed to the inability of the navy to defend both coasts against simultaneous attack, in his message to congress asking for an armaments program, Hamilton said.

"The hearings on the expansion program have done much to convince congress that under existing circumstances, the Atlantic coast is vulnerable to attack," Hamilton said.

"Admiral Leahy's testimony was absolutely in support of our belief that an Atlantic fleet is necessary. In these times of undeclared warfare, it would be comparatively simple for an enemy to scuttle the Panama Canal before we knew it, thus virtually bottling up the fleet in the Pacific from immediate usefulness on the Atlantic."

3 Powers to Discuss Reply From Tokyo.

LONDON—(U.P.)—Japan's refusal to comply with the British-French-United States request for information on navy building plans will be discussed with Washington and Paris as soon as the Japanese reply reaches the foreign office, it was learned today.

The cabinet, at its weekly meeting on Wednesday, was expected to authorize plans for building ships larger than 40,000 tons, as well as larger cruisers.

Both categories will be included in the navy budget to be announced in about three weeks.

Paris, London and Washington were expected to consider whether Tokyo's offer of discussions, mainly on quantitative limitation, would really lead anywhere in the limitation of total tonnage.

Informed sources believed diplomatic contact on the subject might be maintained with Tokyo while plans are pushed through here for heavy capital ships and cruisers.

LINCOLN TALES RECALLED TODAY

Emancipator Described As A Great Statesman And Hen-Pecked Husband.

Lincoln's assassination in the Ford theater in Washington. The next day I was worn out."

The little old lady squinted, her eyes still sharp, but red rimmed with the years, and looked out at her neighbor's cottage. She tried to recollect, on the anniversary of the great emancipator's birth, what it felt like to pass on to the nation the story of his sudden death.

"The colored folks seemed to feel bad because they felt they owed Lincoln so much. And the white folks not only were saddened, but I think many of them were a little scared of what the colored people might do, they felt so bad about it.

"A lot of people had been wearing black anyway, because of the war, and when church let out on Sunday it looked as if a great black pall hung over the whole world."

Mrs. Butler looked a bit wistful today, as she sat in the small living room of her tiny cottage. It was filled with antique furniture, paintings and knick-knacks, and recalled that epochal night.

3,000 WILL GET GARBAGE BILLS

City Department to Mail First Quarter Statements Monday.

The 3,500 customers of the city garbage service will receive their first quarter bills Tuesday, Fred E. Lingafelter, secretary of the water, sewer and garbage department said today.

The statements total approximately $6,000 and will be placed in the mails early Monday. Payments are due at the office of the garbage department in the city building between Feb. 15 and Feb. 25.

Customers' names are placed on the delinquent list after Feb. 25 for non-payment, and if bills are still unpaid March 1, the service is discontinued, Lingafelter said.

Urges Highway, Liquor Department Quiz

Not That It Matters

—By JANE WILLIAMS

IF I WERE writing this column in Germany I would start out by telling you that if we are to remain a great, progressive country we must expand; that the state is above God, with Herr Hitler just between the two. I wouldn't believe it, but I would write it—because the state would tell me to.

Thursday night I went to the Schine theater in Bucyrus at the invitation of the management, to see this month's issue of The March of Time. The entire issue is given over to an uncensored appraisal and resume of Nazi Germany under five years of Hitler.

It tells an amazing story; a story of regimentation and suppression such as the world has ever seen—and done so subtly that 65,000,000 people accept it, and—on the surface at least—are contented.

Under the same circumstances, I think we, too, would accept it.

* * *

THE newspapers, periodicals of all kinds, radio, and public speakers say only what the state wants them to say. Not one voice is raised in criticism—not publicly at any rate. But these facts about the German people who are less than 4,000 miles away from us, are worth remembering:

There is no unemployment in Germany among able-bodied men. Every workman is paid $10 a week by the state but he has no choice of the work he is to do. He may not go on a strike and he may not ask his boss for a raise in pay. Out of his weekly pay he must give so much to charity, which is collected by the state.

Farmers must raise what the state designates or the farm is taken away from them. They must also meet their production quotas or bear a heavy fine. By this program Hitler has learned that agricultural land used to its capacity will yield only 80 per cent of Germany's food supply, and that to be self-sustaining—his goal—Germany "must expand."

That is drummed into man, woman and child daily: Germany MUST EXPAND!

* * *

CHILDREN have no schooling until after the day's work is done, and then it consists entirely of phases of Germany's needs and plans for expansion. Every small school boy knows that "expansion" means taking territory by force of arms.

The child's entire life, therefore—education, religious training (such as it is) athletic activities and medical attention are under the direct supervision of the state.

When boys are 18 they enter compulsory military training. Right now Germany has the greatest and best trained fighting unit in the world. (Russia outnumbers it, but can't compare in training), and only 20 years after the signing of the shameful treaty of Versailles, which forbid Germany to arm at all.

* * *

HOW ARE intelligent people kept contented on such a program of suppression and meager living? By insidious propaganda which is directed from the seat of government and spreads out like an invisible cloud of poison gas.

Sitting in their humble homes or in public meeting places, the German hears such propaganda as this:

"Sixty-five thousand unemployed have starved and frozen to death in Cleveland, O." . . .

"Hundreds were killed today in Detroit, Mich., by Communist rioting" . . . "Mayor LaGuardia controls and profits from all of the vices and rackets in New York City." . . .

* * *

THESE, and others like them from all parts of the world are told to the German workman and farmer, and he, in his humble home with no future to worry about, is made to feel that a roof over one's head and meat in the pot is infinitely better than dying of starvation on the streets of Cleveland!

Americans, watching this Nazi program, must squirm when it is shown in the same picture that the leader of Nazism in America—a naturalized German-American — has signed more than 200,000 German-Americans to support the Swastika in this country and that there are more than a dozen training camps for them across the country.

There is no secret about this. The American government is well aware of it. And still does nothing about it.

And with Nazi Germany preparing daily for an "expansion" program, Fascist Italy doing exactly the same thing, and Japan already well launched on expanding over conquered territory, the idealists still tell us there is no immediate danger of another world war.

Maybe I'm dumb!

* * *

IN HIS lonely cell in Alcatraz, Al Capone, once lord of all the killers and vicious racketeers in Chicago, is said to be going mad, from solitude, routine and discipline.

More likely he has had time to think about the broken heads, the bullet-pierced bodies and charred human remains that have strewn his path. If he is mad, it will be a legitimate excuse for keeping him locked up the rest of his life, and America will be infinitely better off.

Only the most maudlin sentimentalist will sympathize with the vanquished vice lord, or suggest leniency for him.

* * *

A HOLLYWOOD columnist is naively amazed at a fact "dug up" by the research department on the production of "Marie Antoinette," to wit: that when a royal heir was born, the high lords and ladies-in-waiting crowded into the queen's bedchamber to witness the event.

What Hollywood needs is a good stiff course in eighth grade history.

MANSFIELDERS who are sincerely interested in a program of beautification for city parks, should mark a ring around Thursday, Feb. 17, on the calendar and make it their business to attend the Town Hall meeting at Chamber of Commerce, which will be devoted to discussing that program.

And don't put off going in the hope that "George will do it."

METCALF HITS 'CONTACT MEN' OF DISTILLERS

Tells Lincoln Day Audience Friends of Administration Must Be Hired.

(By Associated Press)

TOLEDO — Senator Verner Metcalf of Marietta, Republican floor leader and a member of the senate investigating committee wants the committee to study affairs of the state liquor and highway departments.

Metcalf addressed a Lincoln day banquet of the Lucas County Republican club last night at which John W. Bricker, regarded as a probable candidate for the Republican gubernatorial nomination, said "honesty, public morality and representative government must be re-established in Ohio."

The senator, coming from a committee hearing at Columbus on contributions to the Democratic state executive committee by persons doing business with the state, told his audience:

Cites Contact Men.

"We should determine why it has become necessary for the big distilleries to employ a personal friend of the present administration as their contact man with the liquor control department.

"Why have certain corporations sprung up in Ohio during the present administration for the sole purpose of handling or transporting liquor, corporations with personnels so closely connected with the administration that vicious and unanswered accusations are being bandied about?"

Metcalf claimed it costs the state highway department "enormous sums" to build a mile of road with "hot-mix."

"Is there a rakeoff?" he asked. "If so, where does it go and why?"

Bricker said the senate investigation was proving charges he made in the last gubernatorial campaign.

"The spirit of an honest Lincoln," he declared, "cries out that representative government is lost when privileges of government become purchaseable. They are for sale in Ohio today."

As the committee delved into the sale of coal to the state yesterday, Gov. Martin L. Davey ordered State Purchasing Agent Glenn A. Horn "to tell the simple truth that you followed the same policy that was established by Gov. Vic Donahey to buy coal mined at the fair market price."

On this Senator Donahey commented at Washington, that during his administration as governor "all coal was purchased on competitive bids — no question ever was raised as to the manner of competitive letting."

GIVES CONCERT

Ashland Orchestra to Present Noted Pianist Feb. 21.

A number of Mansfield music devotees will attend the second concert of the season of the Ashland Symphony orchestra which will be given Monday night, Feb. 21, at McDowell auditorium.

The concert is of more than passing interest because of the appearance of Moriz Rosenthal, New York City, distinguished pianist who is equally at home on the concert stages of Europe and America. Rosenthal is said to be the only living pupil of the great Franz Liszt.

He will present two numbers with the orchestra and a group by himself. Louis E. Pete of Ashland will conduct the orchestra. This is the second season for the Ashland Symphony.

Information concerning the reservation of seats may be obtained at The News-Journal business office.

NAZIS RESENT 'RUMOR' WAVE

Berlin Believes Hitler To Take Steps Soon To Bring Return Of Confidence.

(By Associated Press)

BERLIN—A swelling wave of resentment swept nazidom today over foreign rumors of army unrest, and there was belief Reichsfuehrer Hitler might decide upon a dramatic step to restore confidence at home and respect abroad for Germany's military might.

A "we will show them" spirit dominated editorial comment in the government controlled press.

Indignation increased hourly over the unprecedented bombardment of reports from abroad of supposed army revolts, street fights in Berlin and executions of generals—all officially denied—since Hitler assumed supreme command of the German armed force last week to further its nazification.

Foreign military and diplomatic observers generally admitted they were unable to find any basis for the rumors, beyond a certain uneasiness and discontent in some army quarters.

Had rumors of the armed revolt been isolated flareups in one or two foreign newspapers, the whole affair might have been laughed off.

But Europe has been blanketed so thoroughly and foreign radio broadcasts have saturated the German public so thoroughly that some feel Hitler may decide a dramatic counter-demonstration is necessary.

Resumption of full sovereignty over Danzig (made a free city by the Versailles treaty) is one possibility which always suggests itself to those trying to guess Hitler's next move.

SON BORN TO GLATTKES

Supt. Arthur L. Glattke of Ohio State reformatory was the proud father today of an eight pound son born this morning to Mrs. Glattke in a Toledo hospital. The new arrival has been named Arthur Lewis. Mr and Mrs Glattke lived in Toledo before coming to Mansfield.

PLANS FOR U. S. SUPER-HIGHWAY SYSTEM GAINING MOMENTUM

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON—A congressional campaign for construction of a trans-continental super-highway system gained momentum today when sponsors emphasized its potential value in national defense.

"I am certain the administration will support the proposal and I hope to get public hearings on the bill started next week," Sen. Robert J. Bulkley, D., Ohio, author of the measure, said.

"While we could not, of course, build such highways merely for national defense, they would be an important adjunct to national defense through the speedy movement of military forces."

Bulkley said he was confident of an early favorable report on his bill by the banking and currency committee and predicted its passage this session.

Military experts, meantime, were giving the proposal thorough study with a view to making certain that all requirements for military use will be met if congress authorizes the $2,000,000,000 (B) measure. The bill calls for construction of the highways as a self-liquidating public works project to "provide additional facilities for national defense and to promote public safety." The entire system envisaged would cost upwards of $8,000,000,000 (B).

The width of the roads, the material used and the bridges and underpasses will be built to facilitate speedy movement of heavy military equipment which otherwise would completely tie up normal highways, the experts said.

The problem of making armed forces as mobile as humanly possible has been a dominant one in recent years and one of the most important factors has been the roads available. Sponsors of the bill were counting on strong national defense advocates to give them as much aid as advocates of additional relief expenditures.

FOREMEN MEET

Goodyear Official Speaks To City Club Monday.

A. C. Horricks, director of publicity and education for the Goodyear Tire and Rubber company, Akron, will address the Mansfield City Foremen's club monthly dinner meeting at 6:30 p. m. Monday at the Mansfield-Leland hotel. His topic will be "Man Meets Machine."

The program, which will be in charge of the Mansfield Tire and Rubber company, also will include musical numbers and a talk on "Safety," by a representative of the State Industrial commission.

C. F. Beddard, president of the club, said delegations of foremen from Cleveland and Ashland have indicated they will attend the meeting to obtain information concerning the organization of similar clubs.

EX-RAILROADER DIES IN BUCYRUS

Edgar Benton, 74, Succumbs After Illness of Several Years.

BUCYRUS—Edgar Grant Benton, 74, a retired New York Central trainman, died this morning at City hospital following an illness of several years. He had been confined to the hospital since Wednesday.

Born Nov. 23, 1863 in Cincinnati, Mr. Benton had been employed by the railroad for 43 years, retiring in 1929. Since retirement he made his home at Oceola, near here.

Surviving are his widow Minnie L., a daughter, Mrs. Grace Greber of Grove Point, Mich., and a sister, Mrs. William Linser of Bucyrus. Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. Monday at the Wise funeral home. Burial will be in Oakwood cemetery.

NEWSPAPER EXECUTIVE DIES

PEORIA, Ill. — (AP)—Clarence Eyster, 55, chairman of the board of managers of the Peoria Star, died today of a heart ailment. Physicians said the shock of injuries he suffered several months ago in an automobile accident at Mt. Vernon, Ky., was a complicating factor.

Up and Down THE STREET

Dean Rex, principal of Carpenter school, and J. R. Drumm, president of the Carpenter P. T. A., are blaming each other for the mix-up that sent him on a tour of the city last night in search of a P. T. A. meeting that won't be held until next week, visiting two churches where meetings were in progress, they found that neither session was a lecture on school problems, but that one of the churches they had visited was the right one, only the lecture is next Friday night.

Mayor Claude M. Hunter missed a chance to perform his first marriage ceremony yesterday. A young couple from Butler found that the mayor was in Columbus conferring with health officials when they called at his office to have him marry them. The knot was "tied" however by Municipal Judge G. E. Kalbfleisch who is somewhat of a veteran at officiating at weddings.

When you get as far away from Mansfield as San Antonio, Tex., it's a thrill to see someone from your old home town—and if you don't see the person, just a Mansfield car will do. That was the experience recently of Bob Cole, just back from the southwest. He noticed an Ohio car parked in San Antonio, and the letters on the license indicated it was from Mansfield. Cole waited two hours for the owner to appear, and then gave up. He hadn't driven a block before the Ohio car passed him, travelling too fast for him to identify the driver. But he was glad to have seen the car, anyhow.

The city school instrumental music course was two cornets to the good today as the result of their request this week for discarded musical instruments. Instructors, glad to have them, are still in need of more instruments of any kind. They can use more cornets, and violins and—well, practically anything that makes music. Anyone who has an instrument he doesn't want any more can quickly dispose of it by calling senior high school.

"Red" Skelton, brother of Paul Skelton of Mansfield, is back with his first love, vaudeville, after taking a flyer in the cinema with Ginger Rogers in "Having A Wonderful Time." He is back on the Ohio vaudeville stages — Cincinnati and Cleveland, with what reviewers believe is a funnier act than before. He has a new partner in his act this time, a pretty girl, Edna Stilwell, who aids him in his more intricate gags.

UPPER HOUSE VOTES MONDAY ON CROP PLAN

Backers Claim Easy Victory On Eve Of Final Ballot; Republicans Opposing.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON—With the senate set to approve the farm bill conference report Monday and send it to President Roosevelt for signature, veteran members today saw in the measure "political dynamite" in the elections next fall.

Under a unanimous consent agreement, the senate will vote not later than 3:30 p. m., Monday. There was no session today.

Though an overwhelming majority of the senate was polled in favor of the bill, privately misgivings over the effect of the measure were expressed. Touching every producer of major crops in the nation, reaction of the farmers once the plan goes into effect was speculated upon.

G. O. P. To Vote 'No.'

Most of the Republican senators will vote against the report, which is materially different than the bills previously passed by house and senate. A few southern Democrats also will vote against it. But indications were the measure would be approved by a vote of at least two to one.

Senator Johnson (R) of California, already critical of the administration's foreign policy, indicated he would speak on the farm bill Monday, presumably against it.

Prediction by Senator Bailey (D) of North Carolina, that some 25,000 North Carolina farmers would be "driven off their farms" by the bill caused a stir on Capitol Hill. Senator Burke (D) of Nebraska, said many of the farmers in his state were opposed to the bill.

Chief argument against the measure was that it proposes an unconstitutional control of farmers, compulsion on what they may plant. The bill provides, however, that the more drastic marketing limitations shall not apply until two-thirds of the farmers in each commodity approve.

Senator Norris (IR) of Nebraska, joined Senators Pope (D) of Idaho, Hatch (D) of New Mexico, and other administration supporters in insisting that the bill become law and be given a fair trial. They said they considered it the best bill available.

Authorizing creation of thousands of county, district and other committees for its enforcement down the line to the individual farmer, political observers said they saw in the measure the makings of many a squabble on the Hustings.

Hollywood Speaks—

—By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—All that the set of "Marie Antoinette" lacked the other day was a spoon. The whole thing looked like an enormous, glittering dessert, rich beyond a gourmet's dreams.

This was perfectly proper, for the set was a ballroom of Versailles in the most brilliantly decadent period of France's history, the final fling of monumental vanity in an era of lavish courts before the black storm of the Revolution. At no time in the world's history—I quote my coudite studio informant — were women and men such abject slaves to giddy and insane fashion. The feminine body was but a rack on which to load gowns and ornaments, and still more ornaments. High powered wigs, tight-waisted gowns with a wingspread to fill a modern kitchenette, were but the foundations of a costume. With this humble start, a lady merely had to pile on everything she could grasp—jewelry, flowers, feathers—and she'd stand a chance of getting by. At least until Marie Antoinette entered the room. Marie had a way of outsmarting the other girls every time. (Which is not, of course, the only reason Norma Shearer plays the role.)

* * *

The ballroom was — well, a copy of its original, stately and brilliant, white with candlelight in crystal candelabra. Real candles really burning. About 600 lords and ladies, each dressed to kill, were lined up for the dance.

I said it was a dessert—maybe a box of bonbons would be better. Mounds of silk and satin and brocades, in all shades, filigreed with gold and silver and dripping with jewels, and topped off with the icing, the frosting the whipped cream of the 1st century. Incredibly over-filling tutti-frutti-ed bonbons, these lacy confidants, these luscious sundaes, and I believe it now—the film will cost at least 2,000,000! Every costume is the real McCoy, at once a headache and a delight to our Adrian, who went abroad to make his notes and must have come home in a frenzy of creation.

For a lady to dress in those days required five to six hours, but M-G-M has applied the "assembly line" principle and disposes of the extras in no time at all.

Make-up artists and hairdressers—120 of em—are on constant duty, the hair experts doing night work preparing the wigs for the next day.

FORUM DEALS FRANKLY WITH OLD PROBLEMS

Youth Group, Believed First Of Its Kind In Nation Meets Weekly.

The "hush" mask is being stripped from personal and social problems for some 200 Mansfield youths who meet weekly in the Community Christian Youth Forum.

Unlike a period of a few years ago when such subjects met with a soft-pedal of the most secretive type in the home and elsewhere, the Forum deals with them frankly and sensibly to give youngsters of the teen age an insight into what is before them.

The organization's objectives are not limited solely to problems of a social nature but it forms a medium through which youth is given knowledge of civic, state and international affairs.

Biblical teachings as they apply to problems they are studying are carried out in the program.

First In Nation.

There is no other community in the nation, churchmen here say, that is carrying out a similar program, but word that has gone out from Mansfield has led to consideration of establishing such discussion organizations in other centers.

Subjects considered at the weekly meetings provide some conception of the Forum's activities. These topics have been discussed recently: "The Bible In Relation to the Problems of Youth"; "The Problems of Youth In Relation to Life's Work"; "Youth In Civic and International Life"; "Social and Mental Hygiene."

Speakers who have discussed these topics include: Harold W. Arlin, Dr. D. D. Deeds. Dr. Neil McDermott, Cleveland psychiatrist; C. V. Thomas, president of Fenn college, Cleveland; Paul Winters, John Simpson Junior high school instructor; Dr. F. J. Heringhaus, Rev. D. N. Roller, Rev. Hayes M. Braker, Police Chief M. K. Bates, D. S. Stophlet and others.

In the weeks to come, the Forum will discuss such subjects as "Facing With Christ the Mood of Doubt," "Christ In the Life of Youth," "The New Testament and Youth," "Contagious and Social Diseases" and "First Aid Youth."

Dr. Frank H. Caldwell, president of Louisville seminary; Arthur Hudson, Cleveland attorney; Dr. Chester Oxley, student pastor of Denison university, and Eliot Ness, safety director of Cleveland, are among speakers booked for future meetings.

Other Churches Invited.

The Youth Forum was started as a program for young people of the Park Avenue Baptist church at the suggestion of Dr. W. E. Wygant. An invitation was extended all churches of Mansfield at a meeting of the Mansfield Ministerial association.

This invitation led to the enrollment of the First Congregational, First Presbyterian, United Presbyterian, Park Avenue Baptist and Central Methodist Episcopal as co-operating churches.

The Forum has attracted an average attendance of 190 persons. They meet weekly at 6 p. m. at one of the churches included in the program.

It is open to boys and girls 12 years of age and older. Subjects are presented by guest speakers and this is followed by group discussions. Private interviews are arranged each week under the leadership of a physician, a business man or woman and a minister.

"Facing With Christ the Mood of Doubt" will be the subject discussed tomorrow night at the Central Methodist church by Dr. Caldwell, president of Louisville seminary. The John Simpson Junior high school orchestra, directed by Lawrence S. Frank, will provide musical entertainment.

CHOIR TO HOLD VESPER SERVICES

New First Congregational Group Makes Debut Feb. 27.

The first in a series of Sunday afternoon vesper services at the First Congregational church will begin Sunday, Feb. 27.

Music will be furnished by the newly organized church choir under the direction of A. LeMoine Derr. During the series the choir will feature the anthems of Handel, Hayden, and Beethoven.

'SOUL' IS TOPIC

Lesson-Sermon to be Read Sunday at Scientist Church.

"Soul" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon which will be read in Church of Christ, Scientist, Sunday.

The Golden Text is: "My soul shall be joyful in the Lord: it shall rejoice, in his salvation" Psalms 35:9).

Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "For the word of God is quick, and powerful, and sharper than any twoedged sword, piercing even to the dividing asunder of soul and spirit, and of the joints and marrow, and is a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart" (Hebrews 4:12).

Typical Session of City's Youth Forum

(News-Journal Photo.)

Mansfield Community Christian Youth Forum is shown in the above photo in one of the weekly Sunday evening sessions. Social problems, once a "hushed" subject in the home and elsewhere, religious training and lectures on civic, state and international affairs are among the forum's discussion subjects The photograph was taken at the United Presbyterian church, one of five Mansfield churches co-operating in the movement, believed to be the first of its kind in the nation.

JOIN IN SERVICE

Baptist Choir, Organist to Give Special Numbers.

Special vocal and organ numbers will be given at the 10:30 a. m. service Sunday at the Park Avenue Baptist church.

The church choir under the direction of Lawrence S. Frank, minister of music, will sing Hasler's "O Sing Unto The Lord," and Miss Edna May Boswell will sing as a solo, "Forsake Me Not, O Lord," by Edwards.

Three organ selections will be played by Frank. He will play "Adagio" from "Sonata in C Minor," by Guilmant, a medley of favorite hymns, and "Andante" from "Sixth Organ Sonata," by Mendelssohn.

Rev. Hayes M. Braker, pastor, will preach on the subject, "Wakened by Kindness."

The finance committee of the church will meet at 7:30 p. m., Wednesday at the church.

BEGINS SUNDAY

10-Week Campaign Opens at Woodland Avenue Church.

A 10-week spiritual advancement campaign will be conducted at the Evangelical Congregational church, 16 Woodland avenue, by the pastor, Rev. L. M. Schaeffer, beginning Sunday evening.

The services will continue through Easter Sunday. Messages to be given by Rev. Schaeffer will deal with the various phases of the believer's life.

Sermon subjects for each Sunday in the series are: Feb. 13, "The Believer and the Christian Life;" Feb. 20, "The Believer and the Church Services;" Feb. 27, "The Believer and the Lord's Day;" March 6, "The Believer and the Secret Closet;" March 13, "The Believer and God's Word;" March 20, "The Believer and God's Tenth;" March 27, "The Believer and His Friends;" April 3, "The Believer and the Diversions;" April 10, "The Believer and the Testimony;" and April 17, Easter, "The Believer and the Consecration."

JUNIOR CHORUS GIVES CONCERT SUNDAY NIGHT

Group of 25 Voices Presents Program of Sacred Music At South Main Church.

The Mansfield Junior Civic Chorus of 25 voices will present a concert of sacred music at 7:30 p. m. Sunday at the South Main Street Evangelical church.

The program will include, "Break Forth Into Joy," by Barnby; "Hear My Prayer O Lord," by Pike, "Precious Jeasus," by Iden; "Through the Day the Lord Has Spared Us," by Wallis-Orem; "Thou Dist Leave Thy Throne," by Schnecker; and "Great and Marvelous," by Gaul.

Organist To Play.

The chorus will be under the direction of J. Frederick Wolf, with Miss Lillian Damlos as accompanist. Wolf will play three organ selections. For the prelude he will play "Angeleus," by Massenet; for the offertory he will play "Preaumerei," by Schumann, and "Preists' March" will be played for the postlude.

A short talk will be given by Rev. Richard Wolf, pastor of the Evangelical Lutheran church at Plymouth and a member of the chorus

At the morning service at 10:30, the Women's Missionary society of the church will hold their Day of Prayer. Guest speaker will be Miss Floe Mellick of Shenandoah. Miss Mellick is preparing for the ministry.

JUDGE SPEAKS

200 Hear Huston at Father And Son Dinner.

Attending Sunday school regularly is a pretty good guarantee against a boy becoming a juvenile delinquent, Judge C. H. Huston asserted at the annual Father and Son banquet, sponsored by the Brotherhood of First Methodist Episcopal church Thursday night. About 200 fathers and sons attended the dinner.

Judge Huston said that few boys come into court who attend Sunlay school or whose fathers attend.

J. Leo Hartman, faculty member at Senior High school, spoke to the sons on character, and William Sites responded for the sons. Other speakers were Wayne Ward, superintendent of First Methodist Sunday school and Rev. E. G. Corwin, pastor.

Entertainment was provided by the William Kurt All-Girl orchestra, with Miss Marjorie Silcott as soloist; Miss Charlotte Brighthill and Ralph Smith, Galion. Mrs. Robert Alexander was in charge of the dining room and William Gugler led the singing.

HEAR ATTORNEY

St. Matthew's Young People to Have Kramer as Speaker.

Atty. John F. Cramer will address the young people of St. Matthew's Lutheran church at a meeting at 6:30 p. m. Sunday in the church parlors on "Young People and Social Life." The devotionals during the meeting will be conducted by the Knights of Honor Sunday school class of which Mrs. Ray Bush is the teacher.

The two services will be held Sunday at the church. At 10:30 a. m. Rev. Charles F. Sheriff, pastor, will preach on the subject, "Building the Walls of Zion" and in the evening on "Loving the Brethren."

Meetings of two groups of the church are scheduled for next week. Monday evening the Mary Voegle Missionary society will meet at the home of Mrs. Harry Smith, Bowman street, and Tuesday evening the Amoma Sunday school class will hold its meeting at the church.

PASTOR PLANS SERMON SERIES

Rev. Tropf To Use 'The Second Coming of Christ' as Theme.

Rev. H. E. Tropf, pastor of the Grace Gospel Tabernacle, will begin a 10-week series of sermons on the general theme, "The Second Coming of Christ," at 7:30 p. m. Sunday

Services in this series will be held each Sunday night. Subjects will be: "Is Jesus Christ Coming Back To Earth Again?"; "The Time of Christ's Coming"; "The Manner of Christ's Coming"; "The Rapture of the Saints and the Revelation of Jesus Christ"; "The Signs of Christ's Coming"; "The Final Conflict"; The Eternal State"; "The Great Tribulation"; "The Millennium," and "The Antichrist."

BRITON SPEAKS TO INSTITUTE

Member of Parliament Gives Second Talk in Series at Senior High Monday.

Alfred Edwards of London, England, a member of British parliament, will speak at the Senior high school auditorium Monday night in the second of a series of five weekly lectures sponsored by the Mansfield Rotary and University clubs.

Edwards, who comes to the city as one of the lecturers in the Institute of International Understanding, will speak on "Organizing for World Peace." There is no admission charge for the meeting which opens at 8:15 p. m.

Elected to parliament in 1935 as a member of the British Labor party, Edwards has made an intensive study of international problems and has lectured on government and economics in the United States and several European countries.

He is also widely known as a business executive in England as managing director of the firm of Middlesbrough, England.

A member of the Rotary club at Middlesbrough, he is on a lecture of the United States at the invitation of Rotary district governors in this country. He was the speaker at a conference of district governors of Rotary at Montreux, Switzerland last summer, and last fall was in the United States for a series of talks in the middle west.

The Institute of International Understanding will bring three other speakers to Mansfield, on Feb. 21 and 28 and March 7. The talks will be given by C. Douglas Booth, of London; Harry H. Love, Professor at Cornell university, Ithaca, N. Y., and Allen D. Albert of Paris, Ill.

The institute is under the direction of a joint committee of the Rotary and University clubs, with H. A. Bruce of the University club as chairman.

SPEAKS AT MISSION

Mrs. Mary E. Garrison will speak Sunday afternoon at the Christian and Missionary Alliance, 226 North Diamond street. The service begins at 3 p. m.

CITY HEARS CHOIR SUNDAY THAT BROUGHT ST. OLAF COLLEGE FAME

The St. Olaf college choir which appears at 3 p. m. Sunday in Senior high school auditorium for a concert, is one of the most widely known and unusual musical organizations in the world.

Directed by Dr. F. Melius Christiansen, the choir of 60 voices has sung before a million people in 30 states and four foreign countries and has brought fame to the little Lutheran college in Northfield, Minn. Its concerts in recent years has provided funds for a new stadium and a $150,000 music building on the campus.

More than 300 students try out for the choir every year, but only those whose voices blend into the smooth unit demanded by Dr. Christiansen are retained as members of the organization.

The choir personnel includes 25 men and 35 women, about a third of whom must be replaced each year because of graduation.

Seats are still available for the concert, Atty. Marshall C. Moore, chairman of the Optimist club's sponsoring committee, said today. Tickets, which sell for $1 and $1.50, may be obtained at the Bell Music company and West's Dry Cleaning company, Mansfield, and the J. F. Orr Typewriter company and West's Dry Cleaning company, Shelby. Moore said tickets for high school pupils are available at 50 cents each.

Proceeds from the ticket sales will be used for the Optimist club's activities at Frendly House.

BRINGS SCOUT WEEK TO CLOSE

Service at First Lutheran Church Sunday Night to Be Attended by Boys, Girls.

The observance in Mansfield of National Boy Scout week will be brought to a close Sunday evening with the annual Boy and Girl Scout religious services at First Lutheran church.

The service begins at 7:30 p. m. and will be attended by Boy and Girl Scouts of all troops in the city and officials of both organizations.

Rev. Grover E. Swoyer, pastor of the church, will preach. His subject will be "Eagle Wings."

A representative of both organizations will give short talks during the service. Mrs. W. M. Layton, representing the Girl Scouts, will speak on "Importance of Girl Scouts" and C. I. Kimmel, area Boy Scout commissioner, will discuss the "Importance of Boy Scouts."

The Boy Scouts will repeat their oath and laws in unison during the service. Both will be dressed in their uniforms. Members of scout troops will meet at their own troop headquarters and march to the church.

SHOWS PICTURES

Rev. Wallick To Present Second Illustrated Sermon Sunday.

The second in a series of illustrated sermons by Rev. Iva L. Wallick, pastor of the Church of the Foursquare Gospel, 168 South Adams street, will be given at 7:30 p. m. Sunday.

Rev. Wallick will preach on the subject, "The Lamp-Lighter." This special series of sermons will continue through February. A program of vocal and instrumental music will be given during the service.

GUEST PASTOR

Seminary Head to Preach at First Presbyterian Church.

Dr. Frank H. Caldwell, president of the Presbyterian Theological seminary in Louisville, Ky., will be guest pastor Sunday morning at the First Presbyterian church. His subject will be "Playing to the Audience."

The senior choir, under the direction of Mrs. C. O. Anglin, will sing two numbers during the service, "Love Divine," by Prichard-Jones, and a negro spiritual, "Go Down Moses," arranged by Harvey Gaul.

Mrs. A. L. Twitchell, organist, will play as the prelude, "Arioso in A," by Bach, and "Jubilate Do," by Silver, as the postlude. The service begins at 10:30.

MEET ON THURSDAY

The Thursday Nighters, a group of young people of St. Paul's Lutheran church, will hold a meeting Thursday evening in the church parlors. The committee in charge of arrangements includes Miss Katherine Bollman, Joe Morganstern, Miss Alice Miller and Miss Katherine Miller.

Living With Parents Problem

By VIRGINIA LEE

"Dear Miss Lee: I am a girl of 20 and I have a problem which I think is a very serious one. I would like to hear your opinion.

"I am very much in love with my husband, but I am having my baby. My husband and I have been married for almost two years. He hasn't furnished me a home. He has as good a job as any of the married people around here. We are living with his parents who are very old—76 and 75 years—and are very hard to get along with. They are foreigners and I am American, therefore our ways are very different. I am used to having clean rooms, but my in-laws are careless about certain things. They will not allow me to clean the house as it should be cleaned. They do not allow me to cook and I am to cook and keep house. They feed the baby, who is six months old, cheese, coffee, meat, fried foods, etc., which aren't good for him, but I can do nothing about it.

"My husband will not permit me to come because he doesn't want to leave the old folks alone. He says he owes them a debt for they have adopted him and reared him when his mother turned him down. I know he owes them something for that, but don't you think he owes me and the baby something for our health, happiness and happiness? Don't you think I should see the baby in a home of our own, healthy conditions and want to do something about it? I can keep a home because three months of our married life we lived away from here and I managed to save money. I will be watching the paper every night for the answer to my problem. Will you please answer it as soon as possible?

"A FAITHFUL READER."

I too think your problem serious, my dear, and you have my sympathy in your position.

One reason you love your husband is because he has an affectionate and appreciative nature, isn't it? That very quality is the one that makes him determined to look after these old people and see that they are cared for as long as they live. I feel very sorry for an enterprising and modern young wife who has to live under these conditions instead of having her own little home to manage. But would you feel happy if you left them alone?

If you could find a little home very near them, maybe you could persuade your husband to move into it. And you and he could run over every day to be sure the old folk were all right. If he believes that he cannot do that try to get along with them for the few years the old folk will live. Keep your own rooms as clean as you wish and let the rest go, even if it goes against your ideas of what is right.

And as to the baby. Why do you not take him to a baby clinic and have him examined? Consult the doctors and nurses and I am sure they will help you to persuade your parents-in-law to stop feeding him the foods that are bad for him. I am aghast at the idea of feeding an infant such foods and upsetting his little digestion. But it is amazing how many millions of babies have survived such fare—and even grown strong and healthy. I certainly would find a way to stop it as soon as possible, nevertheless. An outsider can do this better than you can. Later on you will have many years to enjoy your own home and to run it as you wish. Look forward to that.

WISE PESSIMISM

It is wise pessimism to play a hand as if all important cards held by the opponents were located in the worst possible places. John Nevin of New York was the declarer in this contract. With the diamond 9 won by dummy's 10, he led the 4 of hearts for a finesse. East held the top honors in spades and there was no doubt but that he would have preferred that the lead of the first trick with the ♥ 6 to the Q and won and cashed. The club 5 was next ruffed. As clubs and diamonds were eliminated, the declarer led the heart J and East won with the Q. All East was able to do was to cash his two hearts and the spade A. Had he decided to return a diamond, South could have ruffed and discarded a spade on dummy, so that the outcome would have been the same.

Exposed Ears Demand Much Attention

By GLADYS GLAD

Director, Mansfield News-Journal Beauty Bureau

HAVE YOU noticed that a great many off-the-ear coiffures are being worn this season? It appears now that ears are going to require just as much makeup attention as the face.

There really is something decidedly chic about an exposed ear and, judging from the new jeweled ear ornaments and the present hat and coiffure styles we're going to see a lot of these organs of hearing from now on.

It is by the skillful use of rouge, in the first place, that you can enhance the attractiveness of your ears. Dry rouge should be used for this purpose rather than paste. For ear makeup simply must not look artificial—and the paste rouge is more difficult to apply delicately and skillfully than the dry variety.

If your ears are prettily formed the entire lobe should be delicately rouged. But if your ears are too large, the rouge should be applied only along their inside edge, to help reduce their apparent size. Be sure you use your rouge very lightly, however, so that the ears acquire only a delicate shell-pink coloring.

Hair Arrangement Helps.

The hair can also be arranged to improve the appearance of the ears. If the ears are too broad, a wispy cluster of ringlets before each one will help to decrease their apparent width. If the lobes are perfect, while the upper part of the ear is unattractive, the hair should be waved low down over the upper half, and the tips alone should be exposed, after being softly and skillfully rouged. The rouging gives the ears a delicate shell-pink hue that is most attractive.

Earrings, too, will help to modify the appearance of the ears. But you must always choose wisely the type of earrings you wear. Large button earrings, for instance, will make too-large ears appear smaller. While long, dangling ear ornaments will tend to slenderize and add length to the ears, and will greatly enhance their loveliness. Remember, however, that it is wiser not to adopt an off-the-ear coiffure if your ears are poor shaped or protrude. It is wiser in such cases, to conceal the ears.

Beauty Massage: A bit of warmed olive oil into the base of each of your nails nightly before retiring. This will correct their dry, brittle condition.

THEATER

PROBABLY for the first time in history there is a concerted dancing fear and of course the force is in Hollywood where Paramount has tied up by contract 525 chorus girls for a period of several months. There is, it is estimated, only 500 chorus girls in the film city who can learn any routine within a reasonably short time, and who have symetrical legs—which is as important as ability. These have been contracted for "The Big Broadcast of 1938," "Doctor Rhythm," Bing Crosby's flicker, "College Swing" and "Stolen Heaven." In the mean time other major studios have dancing stars under contract, and find themselves unable to round up enough acceptable chorus girls with which to make pictures built around the stars' shapely underpinning have always been a good asset in the cinema town but right now they are at a premium.

"Happy Landing."

The Ohio changes its routine to open today, instead of Sunday the engagement of Sonja Henie's third picture, "Happy Landing," in which she is reunited with the sweetheart of her first picture, Don Ameche. A gay, but complicated romance sweeps from a little Norwegian village to Paris, New York and Maine with the little Norse skater imagining herself in love with the wrong man, Cesar Romero, who in turn is that way about Ethel Merman. Jean Hersholt makes up a quintet of popular players. The story starts when a song writing band leader flies the Atlantic for publicity. Could Harry Richman have inspired the idea? And with his companion comes down in a Norwegian for hero. Naturally there is plenty of opportunity for Sonja to display her grace and skill on skates and for Ameche to sing several love songs.

Marriage Meddlers

By ADELE GARRISON

Continuation of "Married Comrades"

Thanks to Katie's efficient help, I was able to get through with the care and inspection of Mary's wardrobe in really creditable time. Remembering the request of Dicky's winsome niece that I select her costume for the journey I selected a black suit with a blouse splashed with gold and with gold touches upon her hat, a combination which I knew set off her vivid beauty to perfection.

Katie and I went through all her other gowns repeating the process we had used with my own. The ones we meant to use immediately Katie pressed, ready for hanging in dust-proof wrappings on the side wall of the car tonneau. The rest, after inspection and the cleaning and mending necessary, were packed into the suitcases. So by lunch time the packing was all done save for the last minute items which I knew would not take more than five minutes to tuck into the bags.

"Lost Horizon."

James Hilton's beautiful story of the man who sought and found his "heaven in shangri-La, high in the mountains above Tibet, is brought to the screen after several years of work on it. "Lost Horizon," one of the most popular pictures shown in Mansfield in recent years comes back to the Ritz for Sunday and Monday. Ronald Colman plays the man who finds peace and beauty at the monastery of the Lamas; Jane Wyatt is the girl he finds there. Margo has the role of the dark vivid young girl who turns into a wrinkled old woman when exposed to the chill winds of the world outside; H. B. Warner is Chang, a priest and Sam Jaffe plays the centuries old High Lama. The backgrounds are of rare scenic beauty.

I had not needed to disturb Mary at all and I felt quite triumphant as I showered and dressed for the journey. I meant to slip off my dress and shoes after luncheon and try to get the nap which Dicky's capriciousness had interrupted in the morning. But it was with a feeling of putting on your best for exhibition that I descended to the dining room for the last farmhouse meal I expected to eat with my husband for weeks to come. My visits to the farmhouse necessarily would be brief emergency calls, demanded principally by what Dicky was already supposing "the foreign royalty invasion." And there was no reason to think that Dicky by his own words "bored to tears with both queens and princess" would either be able or willing to fit his schedule of homecomings to mine.

In Safe Hands.

The children would be in Katherine's competent hands and they were used to our absences. I meant to be home to welcome them but knew that I could stay but a few hours or that visit or the later one when I should welcome Queen Olga and Princess Olga to the sanctuary of the farmhouse.

So it was with a feeling of hail and farewell that I went into the dining room to find Mother Graham, Miss Whitlock and Dicky already there, the two women seated at the table and Dicky standing patently awaiting my arrival. He sprang forward as I entered and pulled out my chair with an exaggerated, grandiloquent gesture.

"I thought you were never coming," Mother Graham said reprovingly, and I kept my lips from twitching with difficulty as I thought of an old quip of Dicky's. "It's a rash person who comes between the mater and her vittles."

Madre Apologizes.

"I'm so sorry to be late," I said contritely. "Why didn't you begin without me?"

"You know that we would never do that unless you were too indisposed to come to the table," my mother-in-law said solemnly. "But I was just about to tell Katie to find out what was the matter."

"I'm so sorry," I said again as I touched the bell. Katie must have been waiting on the threshold, for she came through the swinging door almost before the tinkle had died, bearing the chilled portions of cantaloupes from our own garden.

We were all hungry, Dicky and his mother especially so, and until the melons were eaten and the next course brought on, there was no word from any of us. Then I spoke to Miss Whitlock.

"How is Mary?" I asked.

"Very fit and raring to go!" she answered smiling. "Katie brought up her luncheon a half hour ago and she ate every bit of it. I told her if she rested until I came back, she might get up and get ready for her journey. I assume that you want to start early enough so that you can be comfortably settled by dinner time."

"Yes, indeed," I told her. "All I need is ten minutes' notice."

Dicky Intervenes.

With a carefully suppressed sigh I gave up the nap I had promised myself. But Dicky's eyes were keener than those of the others.

"If you don't mind, Miss Whitlock," he said, "I'm going to propose an amendment to this plan. My wife has been up since before daylight this morning, with only a short nap, if she slept, which I doubt after looking at her eyes. She will have to do the driving into the city and I propose that she have a sleep before she starts. The afternoon is long. A nap of a couple of hours won't make it too late, I am sure."
